Negro Hero of Thirty Years Ago Found in Drift of Recorder's Court

The 75-year-old negro acknowledged Recorder A. W. Callaway's words which committed him to 10 days in the city stockade with a nod of his white wool-thatched head and a respectful "Yes, sah." He couldn't pay the fine of $5 and costs which the recorder had imposed on a charge of drunkenness.

The aged negro shuffled off toward the room in which prisoners are confined before they are taken to the city stockade.

Retired Patrolman Guy Lindsay, seated near the bench in recorder's court Thursday afternoon, stared at the prisoner. A flash of recognition swept across his face. He stepped upon the platform and laid a detaining hand on the aged prisoner's sleeve. "Wait a minute," he said.

He leaned across the bench and spoke in low tones to Recorder Callaway. The recorder beckoned to the old negro who shuffled back to a position in front of the bench and after brief questioning by the recorder reluctantly reached into his pocket and passed something across the judicial desk to the recorder.

Recorder Callaway bent over and read an inscription on a gold medal which the negro had handed him. "You're Bartow Blackman?" he asked the negro.

"Yes, sah," the negro answered.

The medal was awarded Blackman by the solicitor-general and the Fulton county grand jury for an act of heroism—a heroic deed vividly recalled Thursday afternoon by retiring Patrolman Guy Lindsay.

Blackman, single-handed and bare-handed, captured a negro desperado December 6, 1907, on Peters street, who had just shot and killed Police Sergeant J. A. Manier. Blackman, un-mindful of the smoking gun which the killer flourished, had held and subdued him. The white folks thought so much of his heavy duty a medal was drawn and presented to him. That was the medal he displayed to Recorder Callaway Thursday afternoon.

8-Year-Prison Terms For Purse Snatcher

Sam Farley, negro purse snatcher, was given sentences totaling eight to 16 years Thursday by Judge G. H. Howard in Fulton superior court. Farley was found guilty by a jury of snatching purses from Mrs. R. M. Boldridge, 17 Prescott street, and Miss Edna Smith, 183 North avenue. Mrs. Boldridge lost $27 in cash, but the negro discarded or dropped her purse containing about $5,000 in bonds, which was found by a neighbor and returned to her. Miss Smith's purse contained $15.

THREE MEALS A DAY

KITCHEN TESTED RECIPES

by Sally Saver

Do you ever say to yourself "I'd like to plan my dinner tonight without meat," and after thinking about it for a while, decide that it's difficult and end the discussion with yourself by having meat as usual? This is quite often the procedure with most of us. We know that occasional meatless dinners are healthful and a welcome change, but the fact that they require more planning, causes us to neglect serving them more often.

Following are a number of menus without meat that you will enjoy serving:

*Tomato Welsh Rabbit on Toast
Baked Potatoes
Fresh Cucumber Pickles
Waldorf Salad
Whole Wheat Raisin Bread
Currant Jelly

Pineapple and Marshmallow Delight
Salmon Loaf

One pound salmon, flaked coarsely, 1 1/2 cup bread crumbs, 1/2 cup sweet milk, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup preserved sweet gherkins, coarsely chopped; 2 hard-cooked eggs.

Mix thoroughly all ingredients, except hard-cooked eggs. Pack into a buttered coffee can with a lid, and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.), for 1 hour or until the loaf becomes firm. Or, if desired, form into a loaf and bake uncovered in a greased casserole or baking dish which is set in a shallow pan of hot water. Garnish with slices of hard-cooked egg. If baked in coffee can, run a knife around it when you take it from the oven and it will come out of the can nicely molded and very attractive.

Scalloped Potatoes. Pare and thinly slice 4 or 5 medium-sized potatoes, which will make about 1 quart of potatoes. Place potatoes in layers in a casserole, sprinkling each layer lightly with salt and pepper. Over the potatoes in the casserole pour one 10-ounce can of cream of mushroom soup. Bake covered or uncovered in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for about 1 hour—until the potatoes are tender and saturated with the rich mushroom sauce in which they are baked.

Codfish Cakes. One cup salt codfish, 3 cups raw potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, well beaten; dash of pepper, 2 tablespoons tomato ketchup.

Shred codfish, add potatoes and simmer together until potatoes are tender. Drain, mash, beat until light, then add butter, eggs, pepper and ketchup. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered, hot griddle and fry on both sides until brown. Serve with tomato ketchup.

Cape Cod Baked Beans with Corn. One medium can oven baked beans,

Boston style; 2 cups canned corn, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon molasses, 2-inch square salt pork or several slices bacon, 1 small onion, whole.

Place beans in an earthenware pot or in a casserole. Add corn and mix well with beans, then add sugar, salt and molasses. Peel onion and place whole among the beans and corn. Bury the salt pork or bacon in the pot or casserole. If salt pork is used, cut the rind in several places and place it so that the rind protrudes above the beans. Bake in a moderate oven until onion is tender and the flavor of the pork is well through the beans and corn (about 1 1/2 hours). The onion may be removed before serving, if desired. This recipe is adapted from a very old one used on Cape Cod.

Harvard Beets. Two bunches beets, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup sugar, 3-4 cup water, 1-4 cup pure cider vinegar.

Wash beets and cook until tender. Remove skins and slice or dice. Make the sauce as follows: Melt butter and blend with cornstarch, salt, sugar, water and vinegar. Cook the sauce until thickened and clear, add the sliced beets and serve. If beets have cooled, heat them in sauce for a few minutes before serving.

Baked Potatoes Stuffed with Salmon. Bake potatoes, as many as desired. Cut sliced from top, remove centers from shell and mix with an equal amount of flaked salmon or tuna fish. Season with salt, pepper, butter and milk, and refill shells. Top with a thin slice of cheese or tomato and return to oven for a few minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Tomato Sauce. Two tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 1-2 cup tomato ketchup or chili sauce.

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and blend well. Add milk and pepper, and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add ketchup or chili sauce and serve hot.

Noodles with Hard-Cooked Eggs. One tablespoon butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 medium can noodle soup, 1-4 cup milk, 5 hard-cooked eggs, and pepper, toast straw.

Melt butter, add flour and blend well. Add soup, draining it from the noodles, then add milk. Cook until thick, then add noodles and heat through. Pile toast straw box fashion on plates and place a quartered hard-cooked egg, while hot, in each, and season with salt and pepper. Cover with soup mixture, sprinkle with paprika and garnish with watercress. Serves 5.

Tomato Welsh Rabbit on Toast. Four tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour, 2 cups scalded milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 1-2 cups grated cheese, 1-3 cup tomato ketchup, slices or cubes of buttered toast, preserved sweet midget gherkins.

Melt butter in a saucepan, add flour and blend well. Add milk and cook over hot water until thickened, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper. Beat in grated cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Add ketchup and serve on slices or cubes of buttered toast. Garnish with sweet midget gherkins.

TWO REDS SENTENCED TO DIE IN BULGARIA

HASKOVO, Bulgaria, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Two asserted communists charged with anti-government conspiracy today were sentenced to death. Prison sentences ranging up to 15 years were meted out to 35 others.

THIRTY-YEAR SENTENCE SUSPENDED BY JUDGE

Accused Man Freed After Pleading Guilty on Auto Theft Charges.

A 30 years' suspended sentence, said by courthouse officials to be the longest like sentence ever imposed in Fulton county, was given by Judge B. C. Gardner, of Camilla, when Cland Ford pleaded guilty to four indictments in six counts, in which he was charged with automobile theft, changing motor numbers, and receiving stolen goods. In imposing the unprecedented sentence, Judge Gardner, presiding in the emergency division of superior court, followed the recommendation of City Detectives Barrett and Satterfield, who said the man had been instrumental in turning up a negro involved in the same thefts to which the white man pleaded guilty. The negro is now serving a sentence of 12 years. Assistant Solicitor John H. Hudson, assigned to the prosecution of the cases against Ford, vigorously protested the more, as did George Holley, operator for an automobile underwriters' concern.

Hudson said Ford was found in possession of two cars with motor numbers changed, two that were repaired, and another that was identified as having been stolen. Judge Gardner imposed five-year sentences on each of the six counts, to run consecutively, then suspended the entire sentence.

Inge, of Mobile, for appointment as federal district attorney for the southern district of Alabama. They recommended Leo Poo, of Mobile, as Inge's first assistant, and John Bestor Robertson, Jr., of Mobile, second assistant.

THE FRENCH CHEF TAKES HIS DEGREE IN SAUCES

The French chef does not receive his "degree" in the culinary art until he has proved his ability to prepare hundreds of delicate sauces. These sauces are subtly flavored with many fine herbs and unusual combinations of spices. They enhance the natural flavor of the food with which they are served, whether it be a meat, a vegetable, or a salad.

The American taste has not been developed to so thoroughly enjoy the complicated sauces of the French but we do use a few simple ones which have a way of dressing up the meat dishes. Now, of course, meat has so much flavor of its own that the only reason for serving a sauce with it is for the sake of variety.

Braised short ribs, served with a delicious horseradish sauce and automatically moved out of the class of meats for everyday use and put with the ones which are so tasty and interesting that they are reserved for company meals.

Good for Left-overs. Sauces are a valuable accompaniment for the meat which is putting in its second appearance at the table. With the judicious use of some well flavored and simple sauce the food will be so much enjoyed that the family will overlook the fact that the meat was a "left-over."

Olive Sauce for Ham Loaf. Four tablespoons butter, 6 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 2 cups meat broth, 12 olives, cut in pieces, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Melt butter, add flour, salt and pepper and stir until smooth. Add stock gradually and bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Cook 5 minutes, add olives and lemon juice. Boiling water in which 2 bouillon cubes have been dissolved may be used in place of the stock. Serve over ham loaf.

Parsley and Onion Butter Sauce for Steak. One medium onion, 4 tablespoons parsley, chopped; 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, 5 tablespoons soft butter.

Grate the onion onto a large plate and add other ingredients. Work to a smooth paste and spread over the broiled steak as soon as it is taken from the broiler.

Horseradish Sauce. One teaspoon dry mustard, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 3 teaspoons cream, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-3 cup grated horseradish.

Mix all of the ingredients in the order given and beat thoroughly. This is delicious served with beef that has been cooked in water.

Raisin Sauce for Baked Ham. Two tablespoons melted butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups cider, 1-2 cup seedless raisins, dash of salt.

Blend the flour with the butter and add the cider, stirring constantly. Cook until the sauce thickens and add the salt and raisins.

Mustard Sauce. Two tablespoons dry mustard, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 egg yolks, 1-2 cup vinegar.

Mix the dry ingredients and add the egg yolks and vinegar. Cook in a double boiler until thick. Serve either hot or cold with ham. For a snappy salad dressing to be used with vegetable salads, fold in one cup of cream which has been whipped.

Maitre d' Hotel Sauce (For Steak) One-quarter cup butter, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley, 3-4 teaspoon lemon juice.

Put butter in bowl, and work with a small wooden spoon until creamy. Add salt, pepper, and parsley, then lemon juice very slowly. Spread over broiled steak just before it is served.

Currant Mint Sauce for Lamb. One-half tumbler currant jelly, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 1-4 tablespoons finely chopped mint leaves.

Separate currant jelly into pieces, but do not beat. Add chopped mint leaves and grated orange rind. Serve with roast lamb.

Tomato Sauce. Two cups tomatoes, cooked or canned; 1 slice onion, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper.

Cook onion and tomatoes for 15 minutes, and strain. Brown butter, add flour and when well blended, add the tomatoes. Cook until thickened.

In addition to the election of officers and the banquet, the annual meeting will be featured by events for the entertainment of the guests. An unusually large attendance is expected.

rites For G. A. Bass TO BE HELD TODAY

Pearson, will be conducted at 1 o'clock this afternoon at Peachtree chapel, with the Rev. W. H. Faust officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery, with Brandon-Bond-Condor in charge.

TRAY SHOP OPENED AT FRANCES VIRGINIA

The Frances Virginia tea room Thursday announced the opening of its supplementary department to be known as the Frances Virginia tray shop.

This is a self-service department, distinctive in its appointments and equipment. This will not infringe upon their regular tea room business, but will supplement it by affording quick service for those in a hurry and will provide the same quality of food as is served in the main dining room.

It was opened a few days ago without any announcement and has already become immensely popular.

The Frances Virginia tea room and tray shop is managed by the owners, Mrs. W. T. Whitaker and Mrs. Will R. Beck.

A. F. of L. Is Loser In Railway Fight

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 24.—(AP)—On petition of the intervening employee-affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, a suit to prevent the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company from entering into a working agreement with any group other than the association of car department employees was dismissed today by Federal Judge John E. Martineau.

The association employees filed suit contending that the company had contracted with Federation No. 45 of Railway Employees, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The American Federation of Labor intervened, and asked dismissal on the ground the court did not have jurisdiction, inasmuch as the dispute camp within provisions of the railway labor act and that disputes arising out of it should be referred to the labor board.

Thirty days were given for appeal.

Labor Board To Ask Auto Code Scrapping

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(AP)—The labor advisory board tonight demanded that the automobile code be drastically revised or abandoned when it expires February 1.

"After discussing the matter thoroughly," William Green, president of the A. F. of L. and chairman of the NRA board, said, "the board decided it would prefer no code at all to renewal in its present form."

If the industry proposes a renewal without change we will suggest that the code be dropped. We then will go to congress and ask for legislation to permit the president to impose a satisfactory code."

The board found fault with the present code's merit clause, wage and hour provisions and the seasonal character of work in the automobile industry.

The merit clause provided that employers can hire and fire on the basis of merit.

BRUNO ON STAND IN OWN DEFENSE

Stayed Home on Night Kidnap Ransom Was Paid, He Says.

with the kidnap-murder and the ransom money.

Earlier, Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, presiding, had denied a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Hauptmann, who is expected to stay on the witness stand throughout tomorrow, told in his first husky words the story of his life in Germany, his prison term, his training as a carpenter, and his entry into the United States.

Then, in heavy accents, he described his frugal life here, how he worked and saved, first alone, then with his wife, Anna.

Hauptmann's attorneys broke his recital to call the Fredericksens to testify that Hauptmann called for his wife, who was employed at the bakery, on the kidnap night.

Baker Not Sure.

The baker and his wife were not so sure, however, about the date, although they said Mrs. Hauptmann always stayed late on Tuesday nights, and that Hauptmann usually came for her.

Hauptmann, back on the stand, portrayed himself as a hard-working carpenter, intent on getting along prosperously in a nation of prosperous people, working whenever he got work.

saying that he could at all times, and spending little on pleasure.

On March 1, 1932, the day of the kidnaping, he testified, he went downtown from his Bronx home to the Majestic apartments, where he applied for a job as carpenter. The superintendent told him, he said, that he could not put him to work until the fifteenth of the month.

In the meanwhile, he said, he was trying to get a job at Radio City, New York. On the fifteenth of March, he went back to the Majestic apartments and tried again for a job. This time he was successful and worked up until April 2. On the fourth he quit the job.

He resigned, he said, because he had been promised $100 a month and received only $80.

Courtroom Tense.

There was an air of anticipatory tension in the courtroom as Justice Trenchard called for a brief recess prior to Hauptmann's testimony.

It became greater when the recess ended and the word spread that Hauptmann would be called to the stand.

The crowding in the courtroom was so great that the library door was left open to permit persons standing there to hear. Men and women jammed the aisles, stood in the embrasures of the windows, perched on radiators, packed the gallery.

Justice Trenchard warned the spectators to remain quiet and orderly, and after a brief conference of Chief Defense Counsel Reilly, Attorney-General David T. Wilentz and Justice Trenchard, the defense counsel called Hauptmann to the stand.

He rose quickly and stepped forward, a little diffident, a little abashed as he walked without his guards. He stood at the foot of the witness stand, behind him, by agreement of opposing counsel, sat Deputy Sheriff Hovey Low.

Bruno Avoids Lindy Gaze.

Hauptmann's eyes moved swiftly over the audience, then came back to rest on the floor face of Reilly, standing near the jury box.

Wilentz, slightly nervous in appearance, stood near him. Reilly spoke quietly, and Hauptmann's replies were in an even lower tone. He crossed his legs, shifted in his chair once, and once or twice as he talked a smile fled across his pale face.

Colonel Lindbergh's eyes were intent on the witness, but his face did not betray his thoughts.

Hauptmann never met the flyer's gaze. He looked at his attorney, at the floor, at the jury, and once at the ceiling.

He recited briefly his early years in Saxony, where he was born November 30, 1909. He attended a trading school for two or three years. He learned to write German script, but he knew no English writing.

His accent was very noticeable, sometimes it made his words hard to understand.

All eyes were fixed on him. Occasionally Hauptmann's stilted voice broke into the spell with a question. Hauptmann related the successive positions he held after entering the country and details connected with them.

"Yes," said Trenchard, "the defense seems to be going too far."

Apparently angered, Fisher spun on his heel and faced the jury again.

Clean Out
Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles Of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day that means nearly 4 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters become clogged with poisonous waste products and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are clogged, which often causes backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, swelling up night, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestine but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 miles of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues, insist on DOAN'S PILLS, the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

then don't gamble with your body

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs.

1 If your physical let-down is evidenced by lack of appetite... loss of weight... nervousness... a tired feeling or lassitude caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemoglobin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... through. If you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

Make S.S.S. your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... and renewed strength.

2 Take a course of S.S.S. Remember, your present run-down condition may have been a slow, gradual process. Likewise, a reasonable time is required to rebuild full strength. S.S.S. is not a miracle worker—no rebuilding tonic is—but it is a scientifically proven and time-tested medicine. This is your guarantee of satisfaction. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring.

3 Moreover, S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemoglobin of the blood. This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food for better health and happiness. So many say, "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

If your condition suggests a tonic... if you tire easily... get a bottle of S.S.S. take an appetizing portion just before meals. You will find it is truly a blood and body tonic. You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the upstroke today. S.S.S. is really an inexpensive way to better health and more happiness. So many say, "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Tokyo's Rail Representative
Sees City's "Hill of Rocks"

Mr. and Mrs. H. Sato just before leaving for a visit to Stone Mountain. Mr. Sato is a railroad representative of the Japanese government. Staff photo by George Cornell.

Stone mountain and Atlanta's fried chicken are known even in Japan. H. Sato, representative of the Japanese government, and his wife, visiting this city, said they wanted to see "the big hill of rocks that is near somewhere to Atlanta," and Mrs. Sato said "when I am near to the sea I like lobsters, but when I am inland I always ask for fried chicken."

"You see we travel over your country doing the things you do and we like it," Mr. and Mrs. Sato agreed. They have been traveling several months in this section of the United States and in the northeast and middle west.

They saw Stone Mountain Thursday afternoon and then Mrs. Sato went out shopping to get some wool. "I can knit while my husband goes about his business, as you say here."

Mr. Sato is the railroad representative of the Japanese government, and is traveling in this country to study modern streamlining and the methods American companies use.

Pope told how officers had previously described how the first two sections of the ladder were used for the kidnapping. Then he shot the question:

"From your knowledge of wood, would you say this ladder would hold the weight of a man 175 to 180 pounds?"

Koehler's brow furrowed as he looked carefully at the ladder. He said, "Yes," he said, "I think it would."

Q. Could he go up and down, readily, without the ladder breaking?

A. He might.

Q. The nearer the rounds are together the stronger the ladder?

A. I wouldn't say that. The longer the steps of a man, the heavier the jerk on the ladder.

Pope next directed the witness to variations in the width of saw cuts in the ladder.

Koehler said he used a mechanic's thickness measure and tested the cuts with the instrument's various blades until he found those which fit. The cuts varied from 35 to 37 thousandths of an inch.

The experts said he had not made comparisons with standard saws. Pope asked if Koehler observed no lead or red paint in the ladder.

"Yes," he said, "on rail 14."

The expert picked up the section of the ladder and pointed to a small smear. He said he found no other point on the ladder or rounds.

Q. Did you find in your search for lumber, lumber of the same type grade and quality in a lumberyard at Hopewell?

A. No.

Q. If such lumber was found by the state police in Hopewell, it was not shown to you?

A. No.

Q. If it was found at the epileptic village at Skillman (near Hopewell) it was presented to you?

A. No.

Hammer Marks Discovered.

Koehler said he discovered a few hammer marks on the ladder rungs.

Q. A good carpenter doesn't leave hammer marks, he uses a nail set?

A. These were common eight-penny nails driven directly.

Pope turned Koehler's attention to the dowel pin tied to the third section of the ladder.

Koehler said it, and the other, found near the ladder were birch wood.

Q. Did you examine a small piece of wood said to be found by the state police in the Lindbergh house?

A. I don't remember any little piece.

No.

Q. Then you never saw it, that piece said to have been found in the house?

A. I did not.

Pope was apparently trying to turn the kidnapping's trail back into the Lindbergh home in line with the repeated defense hints of an "inside job."

Wilents, on redirect examination, elicited from Koehler that he had traced no lumber such as used in the ladder to Hopewell or Skillman.

Q. Does this ladder look the work of a $100 a month carpenter?

A. I don't know.

Hauptmann's pay before the kidnapping was $100 a month, previous testimony has brought out.

Q. Is this the work of a carpenter?

A. A rough carpenter, yes.

Q. It's a homemade ladder?

A. Yes.

Wilents asked if Koehler thought the ladder would break with a man of 170-175 pounds and the additional weight of 30 pounds.

Pope objected to the question as not proper redirect examination but Koehler was allowed to answer.

He said he couldn't tell.

Wilents brought out the ladder and said "I'm going to climb down."

Wilents next drew attention to the chisels, asking if they were of a make mentioned by Pope. Koehler said he found none of that make among Hauptmann's tools.

Q. A little fellow like myself would have a hard time climbing those rungs?

A. Yes.

Q. A man 5 "9" or 5 "10" would have an easier time?

Pope objected and was overruled.

A. Somewhat easier.

Koehler said the Hauptmann's tools were not "a good carpenter's tools" and the plane was not "a good carpenter's plane."

Hauptmann's face never changed its set expression.

Q. Is it still your testimony those plane marks on the ladder were made by this plane?

Wilents gestured to the plane.

A. It is.

Pope objected and the answer was stricken.

"Is it not a fact," Wilents asked, as if leading to his final question for the state, "that this rung and board found in the attic were one and the same?"

Pope objected and was overruled.

Koehler answered affirmatively.

Wilents turned Koehler back to Pope.

Pope took the witness for cross-examination and asked if the dowel pin holes where the ladder split did not weaken the rail considerably.

Holes Weaken Wood.

The expert said the holes did weaken the wood, but would not say that the splits resulted from the holes. He blamed stress at the point plus the weakness there for the split.

Q. This type of ladder, now, it is used extensively in the south, in the fruit industries?

A. Not to my knowledge. I never saw a ladder like that before.

Koehler was then excused, and the state's legal staff conferred briefly.

State Rests.

Wilents turned from the conference and in low tones said:

"The state rests, your honor."

Reilly announced he would like to continue his cross-examination of Thomas H. Sisk.

Wilents stood on his announcement. "The state has rested. You may call whom you please."

Wilents said he understood the agent would come during the defense's case and there would be no delay.

Reilly also asked to have Miss Hildegard Olga Alexander recalled to test here "credibility."

Wilents said she would be produced but he wanted no delay of the defense case.

"With respect to this lady, I resent the statement that the defense is in possession of any evidence remotely affecting her credibility. However, if counsel desires her appearance, I think it can be arranged."

Sisk would be available, Justice Trenchard said, on assurance from Wilents.

The girl, who told of seeing Hauptmann trailing Dr. Condon, the intermediary, would be recalled by the state, the justice directed.

Wilents' suggestion that she be subpoenaed by the defense was overruled after Reilly said "She'd be more likely to appear at the state's request."

AN UNWISE SUGGESTION

The repeal of the present limit on the charge made by the city government for water service, and the granting to council of authority to fix the rates at any figure, called for in a bill introduced in the general assembly by the Fulton delegation, would be an unwise and dangerous step.

The home owners and business concerns of Atlanta are already paying a water rate materially higher than in most American cities, and above the average for the country.

The present rate is bringing in an annual return that represents to percent of the city's investment in the waterworks.

If the waterworks were privately owned, a rate that would permit such a return would not be permitted.

Neither should the city government have a right to fix an unnecessarily high rate. To do so, will make the rate no longer a charge for service, but an additional tax for revenue purposes.

The elimination of the present limit will create a situation in which council will be faced with the constant temptation to make up deficits by raising the price of water and thus making an additional levy for governmental upkeep on every home and every business concern in the city.

The city government is admittedly in urgent need of increased revenues, but these should be sought through the development of new sources of income, and not through a raise in the water rate. Unless the latter step is contemplated, there would be no reason for the proposal to authorize council to fix the rate at will.

Just as the credit of the state has been maintained, and the taxpayers protected from undue taxation by the state government, by the constitutional tax limitation of five mills, the people of Atlanta are now safeguarded by the wise and liberal limitation on the rate the city government can charge for water service.

There should be universal and vigorous protest against this unsafe and unnecessary bill.

HUEY PIPE DREAMS AGAIN

Whether or not Huey Long's hurried trip to Louisiana is the result of apprehension over the apparently fast-consolidating opposition to his dictatorship, which he disclaims, it has given him opportunity to come forward with another of the pipe-dream projects that during the past five years have been instrumental in increasing the state debt from $45,000,000 to more than $150,000,000.

This time the Kingfish envisions the transformation of Baton Rouge, the capital of the state, into a mimic Washington. He proposes to accomplish this by building a wide thoroughfare, similar to Pennsylvania avenue, through the heart of the city, raze old buildings, build bridges and develop new land.

Asked as to where the money for all this was to be found, the ebullient senator vaguely refers to the sale of land situated a considerable distance from the city.

One way in which Long has been able to attract to his camp the ignorant lower classes of the state's frequent resort to the high-pressure propaganda methods typical of the substitution promoters of the Florida plan. They capitalized on hysteria, instead of facts, and like wise the Louisiana dictator has built upon ignorance and prejudice, instead of patriotism and wise leadership. The "Little Washington" proposal is just another scheme to catch the imagination, with little thought as to where the money is to come from.

THE NEW TAX COLLECTOR

The election of T. Earl Suttles as tax collector for Fulton county places the duties of this important office in capable and experienced hands.

Mr. Suttles has been chief deputy in the tax collector's office for more than a decade, and his able and conscientious performance of his duties have contributed largely to the efficiency with which the department has been conducted during recent years.

The new collector has a long and useful record of public service. A teacher in the county school system for 15 years, he later became superintendent of the boys' industrial school at Hapeville, from whence after six years he went to the collector's office. A member of a well-known Fulton county family, he has lived in the county all of his life.

The elevation of Mr. Suttles to the position filled so ably by the late W. S. Richardson means that there will be no disruption of the smooth and businesslike routine of the office, since he has announced he will make no change in the personnel of the department.

The taxpayers of the county can reasonably expect under the new collector a continuance of the efficient and courteous service to which they have been accustomed in the past.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE

Few Americans have as ably and unselfishly served their fellow citizens as did John Barton Payne, whose death occurred Wednesday in George Washington hospital in the national capital.

Under his direction the American Red Cross has become the most efficient organization for the relief of the distressed world has known. In every visitation from which the people of the country have suffered—flood, pestilence, fire, earthquake, famine, drouth, and unemployment—the Red Cross under his guidance has been the succoring organization to save life and minimize suffering.

As a result of the development of the Red Cross organization during Judge Payne's service as chairman of its board of control, every cross-roads in the United States has been placed in close touch with a relief station from which aid can be extended within a few hours after a calamity, whatever its nature, may occur.

Judge Payne's career illustrates the extent to which America presents opportunity for the achievement of fame and position, and for public service. A native of Virginia, the son of poor parents, he started work as a clerk at 15 years of age at a salary of $50 a month. He studied law at night and was admitted to the bar. Moving his residence to Chicago, he became a judge of the superior court in that city. Among the positions of public trust and responsibility he has held have been that of secretary of the interior under President Wilson, chairman of the shipping board and director general of railroads during the war.

For 14 years he has served as chairman of the Red Cross without remuneration other than, as he himself expressed it, the "personal satisfaction" of serving those whose need was desperate. His gifts to public institutions were numerous and large and he presented a $500,000 art collection to his native state.

Such a life is an inspiration to every young man and woman of America, and an outstanding example of unselfish patriotism and public service to every citizen of the nation.

Imitation is also the flattest sincerity.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The Drink Question in Europe.

After 10 years' continuous residence in Europe, and a certain familiarity with the chief languages spoken here, I may perhaps venture to express an opinion on the attitude toward strong drink of the peoples here in comparison with our attitude in the United States. In the first place let me tell you that story which you no doubt have heard often enough, according to which you never see a drunk in Europe and no abuse of liquor is all but unknown.

These so-called "books" in the English-lands, where men and women together in the evening and which are called "the poor man's club" are, in my estimation, dark spots upon the otherwise brilliant picture of European civilization. The slum and the saloon go together. There is a definite link between the two quarters.

The Alexander Platz in Berlin, Saint Paul in Hamburg, the Faubourg St. Martin in Paris and the Schiedamsche Dijk in Rotterdam, with their endless rows of taprooms, saloons, bars and beachouses are breeding grounds of crime and frustrated lives. Drink is an enemy everywhere and the women know this.

The elevation of Mr. Suttles to the position filled so ably by the late W. S. Richardson means that there will be no disruption of the smooth and businesslike routine of the office, since he has announced he will make no change in the personnel of the department.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

CENSORSHIP? WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The trouble with all these vague charges about a New Deal censorship is that no one can prove anything. If something is suppressed, it does not get out; at least, not often.

An exception to that rule may be offered by a confidential general memo addressed to all personnel in the interior department and public works administration, dated November 27, 1934, and, until now, unpublished. It tells its own story, as follows:

"The secretary of the interior is seriously concerned over the frequency of departmental 'news leaks' and has ordered that every precaution be taken to prevent the issuance of official information through unauthorized channels. To this end, you are requested to co-operate in the publicity procedure indicated herein.

"The department of interior publicity division, headed by Mr. Michael Straus, is the central clearing point for all information regarding the plans and policies of the department and its subdivisions. Mr. Straus is assigned to your division to act in a functional capacity as the representative of Mr. Straus' office and is held responsible by the secretary and Mr. Straus for whatever is published regarding the service. A similar representative of the publicity division has been assigned to each major bureau in the department.

"No information is to be given out regarding the service unless it clears first through Mr. A—, so that the information given will not be in conflict with the wishes of the secretary or of the director."

All inquiries from newspapermen, magazine writers, etc., should be referred to Mr. A—, so that the information given will not be in conflict with the wishes of the secretary or of the director."

The memo is not signed by Mr. Ickes, but by a bureau director, whose name may just as well be omitted.

There is a second memo which will be even more interesting to the proposed Dies congressional investigating committee. It is dated December 5, 1934, and indicates that restrictions against the press also have been applied to members of congress.

"Calls are occasionally received from various sources inquiring regarding positions, certifications, personnel matters, etc. This is especially true with reference to the congress. Well-meaning applicants for positions request members of congress to call the individuals in this bureau who have interviewed them after certification. When calls of this kind are received they should be referred to my office and no information of any kind whatsoever, for any reason, should be given. My office will carefully explain that no information can be given regarding personnel matters other than by Mr. Burlew's office.

"Matters relating to personnel must not, under any circumstances, for any reason, be discussed with members of congress. (Signed) "WILLIAM A. F. STEPHENSON, "Chief of Operations."

These two memos explain the censorship business fully. The fact that the interior department has been unable to keep secret even these private departmental matters is proof enough that such steps are generally ineffective.

Furthermore, the interior department will argue these moves do not seek to effect a censorship, but only to channelize sources of information so that incorrect information will not get out. You may recall this was the explanation for a somewhat similar order issued by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau soon after he took office.

Mr. Morgenthau later modified the order.

The NRA board has been smoking up a lot of things in the dark while considering the cigarette code. It divided, 2 to 2, more than two weeks ago on the question of accepting a code proposed by the industry. More recently, another secret vote was taken and the lineup was still 2 to 2. Thus hopelessly divided, the board decided to submit the dispute to the White House, yet the code strangely failed to reach the president's desk.

Much undercover pressure is being exerted on one member who has been voting against the industry code. He may change his vote. Apparently that is why the code failed to go to the White House more promptly.

One or more senators have heard about the dispute and are just about ready to demand that the board agree or send the matter to the executive mansion.

A little-noticed decision of great importance was issued by the supreme court last Monday. It holds against the common practice of disguising purchases of corporations by calling the purchase a reorganization, and thus avoiding taxes. The case (Gregory vs. Helvering) is expected to add millions in government revenue. One utility company has a profit of $9,000,000 on which it avoided taxes in this way.

The proposed holding company legislation will include only utilities. The wire corporations are already under the communications commission, the railroads under the ICC, all others under the SEC.

Another prize order issued in the public works administration, now spending $5,000,000,000 for recovery, admonished employees about carelessness in wasting pencils.

It is going to be easier for army deserters next year. The appropriation for chasing them is being cut from $30,000 to $20,000.

FAIRENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Happy Ending.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 24.—By a happy coincidence, Ferdinand Pecora, the chunky little Italian attorney, was inducted into office as a judge of the New York supreme court on the day after Charles E. Mitchell, late president of the National City Bank, returned to Wall Street, opening a modest office of his own in which to start all over.

The account of Mr. Mitchell's little housewarming reports him undaunted by the misfortune which threw him in the way of Mr. Pecora during the banking investigation and quotes an old friend of his as saying: "There is one guy who can take it." The friend did not go on to say what Mr. Mitchell can take, or where, but he means clear enough. However, in justice to Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Pecora himself has been heard to say that when he took it, he took it on behalf of his sources of the state's treasury.

The House has an officially designated poet laureate in the person of Representative Prince H. Preston Jr., of Bulloch county, its chairman of the committee on journals. Speaker Rivers gave Preston the title Thursday when he again read the report of his committee in poetry. Representative Preston, brother of a few weeks was in the gallery and joined in applauding the "appointment" of her husband.

Senator Preston Rawlins, of McRae, the president pro tem, of the upper branch of the assembly, won the praise of the young lawyers of the state Thursday when he introduced a bill to provide for payment of a minimum fee of $15 to all lawyers appointed by the courts to represent clients. Representative Rawlins said he felt the payment of a small fee not only would help the lawyers but that it would inspire them to give better service to their hapless clients.

COMMITTEE APPROVES FULL CREW RAIL LAW

Short Lines, Less Than 40-Car Trains, Exempted by Amendment.

By a vote of 15 to 10, the house committee on industrial relations Thursday night approved the Twitty full crew railroad law after a public hearing at the Piedmont hotel.

As approved, the bill carries an amendment by which it does not apply to railroads running 105 miles or less on freight trains carrying less than 40 cars.

Approval of the measure was voted after representatives of the Big Four brotherhood urged its adoption.

After W. L. Stanley, an executive of the Seaboard Air Line railway, speaking for all of the carriers, told the committee it would cost the railroads $1,000,000 a year in Georgia.

Representative Russell Twitty, of Ware county, author of the measure, and H. W. Flournoy, of Cedarblow, chairman of the executive committee of the Big Four, led a group of railway labor representatives in asking approval of the measure.

Twitty and his associates said that in addition to providing work for a number of railroad men the full crew law would give additional safety to both crews and passengers of trains.

Stanley declared the roads already were making excellent safety records and declared adoption of the bill would not improve safety conditions.

Twitty and his associates said that the bill would not stand the cost of the extra men employed and told the committee that if the law is finally adopted the carriers will have to cut off transportation employees to make up for the salaries paid those taken on because of the act.

The vote on the bill was taken at an executive session of the committee following the public hearing.

U. S. Continues Search for Alvin Karpis, Co-Leader of Gang.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Indictment of 22 persons in connection with the kidnapping of Edward G. Bremer by a federal grand jury at St. Paul was announced today by Attorney General Cummings.

He made this announcement in a search for Alvin Karpis, co-leader of the Karpis-Barker gang named as responsible for the abduction, was being pressed without success.

The attorney-general said the indictments were in two classes.

Those accused of the kidnapping itself were named as Arthur R. (Doc) Barker, Volney Davis, Harry Campbell, Elmer Farmer, William Weaver, Harry Sawyer, William J. Harrison, Byron Bolton, Karpis, Joe Doe, Harold Alderton and Richard Doe.

The second series of indictments charged those named with having conspired to carry out the abduction.

Defendants named were Oliver H. Berg, Joseph Patrick Moran, John Joseph McLaughlin, William Edward Vidler, Paul Delaney, James J. Wilson, Jess Doyle, Edna Murray, Myrtle Eaton and a person called "Whitey" whose true name is not known.

Commenting on the second series of indictments, the attorney-general said: "It is interesting to note that those named in the conspiracy indictment are charged with having conspired with several persons now deceased."

They are Kate (Ma) Barker, Fred Russell, Russell Gibson and George Zeigler.

It was understood at the department that several of the persons who have been arrested in connection with the case will make confessions.

Arrested Held Secret.

Cummings would not disclose the names of those indicted who have been arrested, but said that "Doc" Barker for one, however, has been captured. His mother and brother, Fred, were killed by federal agents in a battle at Oklawaha, Fla., several days ago.

Karpis and Harry Campbell escaped a police trap at Atlantic City last week and are still at large.

A published report that Byron Bolton, one of those indicted and charged with having conspired in the St. Valentine's Day massacre in Chicago in 1929 was described by Cummings as "a completely erroneous."

Auto Hits Inmate Wife Pursuing Abusive Mate

The automobile is man's best friend—or at least so believes John McWilliams, negro, of 117 Glenn street, S. W.

McWilliams engaged in a controversy with his wife, Mary, in front of their home Thursday night. During the argument, which became heated, the negro swung his right arm, knocking her down. Then, realizing that discretion is the better part of valor, McWilliams took a hurried departure.

Mary regained her feet and started in pursuit. Unfortunately, she ran in the path of an automobile driven by John A. Yancy, 643 Glenwood avenue, S. W., and was hurled to the pavement, suffering a fractured jaw. Yancy took the woman to Grady hospital, where first aid was administered.

The large properties of Atlanta are in financial difficulties, he admits the need for this bill for reform. It is an indication that something must be done. We have got to face the music on tax revision. This exemption will give us a reform, which we must have.

"The bill, if approved, will not become operative until 1937. There will be another session of the assembly before this bill is affected by it, and we will have ample opportunity to work out a real tax revision program. It is not fair to levy the full tax against the bill, when there are millions of dollars in intangibles escaping any taxation. We have got to have the courage to tackle this problem and I believe passage of the bill will mean that we favor the bill and want to see it passed."

Tag Bills Prospects.

The prospects Thursday night were that the first tag bill ratifying $3 tag of this and other years would be adopted by the assembly without discussion, that the bill making the cheap tag permanent would go through without much difficulty and the establishment of the highway patrol would be approved, perhaps with several minor amendments.

Representative Rivers announced at the close of Thursday's session the house would have today morning and afternoon sessions today and a single session would be held Saturday. Today's sessions will begin at 9 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock as formerly. The house voted 74 to 74 Thursday on the 9 o'clock sessions.

By unanimous consent the measure sponsored by Governor Talmadge was made the first order of business and on today's calendar in both houses are the tag bills, one ratifying the $3 tag of the last three years and the other making the cheap tag a permanent fixture, as well as the bills to establish a radio-equipped highway patrol system. Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the house, and President Charles D. Redwine, of the senate, said they expected to report on the resolution of the regular session which was an effort for delay on the part of opponents of the governor's bill to curtail the powers of the board of regents of the university system and invalidate a projected loan and grant by the regents from the PWA marked the opening of the session.

Following the committee action Key announced he has invited other members of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners on Wednesday.

The dinner will be at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Grand Hotel, to be attended by the regents of the board of regents of the Georgia State Association of County Commissioners on Wednesday.

"We'll probably discuss this matter a little there," Key said. "I feel that the bill is wrong and that even the people themselves will not approve of it."

Auto Hits Inmate Wife Pursuing Abusive Mate

The automobile is man's best friend—or at least so believes John McWilliams, negro, of 117 Glenn street, S. W.

McWilliams engaged in a controversy with his wife, Mary, in front of their home Thursday night. During the argument, which became heated, the negro swung his right arm, knocking her down. Then, realizing that discretion is the better part of valor, McWilliams took a hurried departure.

Mary regained her feet and started in pursuit. Unfortunately, she ran in the path of an automobile driven by John A. Yancy, 643 Glenwood avenue, S. W., and was hurled to the pavement, suffering a fractured jaw. Yancy took the woman to Grady hospital, where first aid was administered.

The large properties of Atlanta are in financial difficulties, he admits the need for this bill for reform. It is an indication that something must be done. We have got to face the music on tax revision. This exemption will give us a reform, which we must have.

"The bill, if approved, will not become operative until 1937. There will be another session of the assembly before this bill is affected by it, and we will have ample opportunity to work out a real tax revision program. It is not fair to levy the full tax against the bill, when there are millions of dollars in intangibles escaping any taxation. We have got to have the courage to tackle this problem and I believe passage of the bill will mean that we favor the bill and want to see it passed."

Tag Bills Prospects.

The prospects Thursday night were that the first tag bill ratifying $3 tag of this and other years would be adopted by the assembly without discussion, that the bill making the cheap tag permanent would go through without much difficulty and the establishment of the highway patrol would be approved, perhaps with several minor amendments.

Representative Rivers announced at the close of Thursday's session the house would have today morning and afternoon sessions today and a single session would be held Saturday. Today's sessions will begin at 9 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock as formerly. The house voted 74 to 74 Thursday on the 9 o'clock sessions.

By unanimous consent the measure sponsored by Governor Talmadge was made the first order of business and on today's calendar in both houses are the tag bills, one ratifying the $3 tag of the last three years and the other making the cheap tag a permanent fixture, as well as the bills to establish a radio-equipped highway patrol system. Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the house, and President Charles D. Redwine, of the senate, said they expected to report on the resolution of the regular session which was an effort for delay on the part of opponents of the governor's bill to curtail the powers of the board of regents of the university system and invalidate a projected loan and grant by the regents from the PWA marked the opening of the session.

Text of Roosevelt's Message

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. (AP)—The president's text: "To the Congress of the United States: During the three or four centuries of white men on the American continent, we find a continuous striving of civilization against nature. It is only in recent years that we have learned how greatly by these processes we have harmed nature and nature in turn has harmed us. We should not too largely blame our ancestors, for they found such teeming riches in woods and soil and water—such abundance above the earth and beneath it—such freedom in the taking that they gave small heed to the results that would follow the filling of their own immediate needs. Most of them, it is true, had come from many peoples lands where necessity had involved the preserving of the bounties of nature. But they had come here for the obtaining of a greater freedom, and it was natural that freedom of conscience and freedom of government should extend itself in their minds to the unrestricted enjoyment of the free use of land and water."

HOW TO REPAIR.

Furthermore, it is only within our own generation that the development of science, leaping forward, has taught us where and how we violated nature's immutable laws and where and how we can commence to repair such havoc as man has wrought. In recent years little groups of earnest men and women have told us of this havoc: of the cutting of our last stands of virgin timber; of the increasing floods, of the washing away of millions of acres of our topsoil, of the lowering of our water-tables, of the dangers of over-cropping, of the depletion of our minerals—in short, the evils that we have brought upon ourselves today and the even greater evils that will attend our children unless we act. Such is the condition that attends the exploitation of our natural resources if we continue our planless course.

But another element enters in. Men and nature must work hand in hand. The throwing out of balance of the resources of nature throws out of balance also the lives of men. We find millions of our citizens stranded in village and on farm—stranded there because nature cannot support them in the livelihood they had sought to gain through her. We find other millions gravitated to centers of population so vast that the laws of natural economies have broken down.

If the misuse of natural resources alone were concerned, we should consider our problem only in terms of land and water. It is because misuse extends to what men and women are doing with their occupations and to their many mistakes in herding themselves together that I have chosen, in addressing the congress, to use the broader term—"natural resources."

For the first time in our national history we have made an inventory of our national assets and the problems relating to them. For the first time we have drawn together the foresight of the various planning agencies of the federal government and suggested a method and a policy for the future.

I am sending you herewith the report of the national resources board, appointed by me on June 30, 1934, to prepare the comprehensive survey which so many of us have sought so long. I transmit also the report made by the Mississippi valley committee of the public works administration, which committee has also acted as the water planning committee in the larger resources bill.

These documents constitute a remarkable foundation for what we hope will be a permanent policy of orderly development in every part of the United States. It is a large subject but it is a great and inspiring subject. May I commend to each and every one of you who constitute the congress of the United States a careful reading of these reports.

In this inventory of our national wealth we follow the custom of prudent people toward their own private property. We as a nation take stock of what we as a nation own. We consider the uses to which it can be put. We plan these uses in the light of what we want to be, or what we want to accomplish as a people.

We think of our land and water and human resources not as static and sterile possessions but as life-giving assets to be directed by wise provision for future days. We seek to use our natural resources not as a thing apart but as something that is interwoven with industry, labor, finance, taxation, agriculture, homes, recreation, good citizenship. The results of this interweaving will have a greater influence on the future American standard of living than all the rest of our economies put together.

PROGRAM OF FUTURE TO BE PLANNED.

For the coming 15 months I have asked the congress for $4,000,000,000 for public projects. A substantial portion of this sum will be used for objectives suggested in this report. As years pass the government should plan to spend each year a reasonable and continuing sum in the development of the country. It is my hope, for example, that after the immediate crisis of unemployment begins to mend, we can afford to appropriate approximately $500,000,000 each year for this purpose. Eventually this appropriation should replace all such appropriations given in the past without planning. As a permanent national resources board, toward the establishment of which we should be looking forward, would recommend yearly to the president and the congress priority of projects in the national plan. This will give to the congress, as is entirely proper, the final determination in relation to the projects and the appropriations involved.

As I have already stated, it is only because of the current emergency of unemployment and because of the physical impossibility of surveying, weighing and testing each and every project that a segregation of items is clearly indicated at the moment. For the same reason the constituting of fixed and permanent administrative machinery would retard the immediate employment objectives of this bill.

Our goal must be a national one. Achievements in the arts of communication, of transportation, of mechanized production, of agriculture, of mining and of power, must minimize the rights of state governments but they go far beyond the economies of state boundaries.

Only through the growth of thought and action in terms of national economies can we best serve individual lives in individual localities.

It is, as these reports point out, an error to say that we have "conquered nature." We must, rather, start to shape our lives in more harmonious relationship with nature. This is a milestone in our progress toward that end. The future of every American family everywhere will be affected by the action we take.

Judge E. E. Pomeroy, Atlanta, Named Vice Chancellor Of Episcopal Diocese at Council Convention Session

Members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta, meeting at the Pro-cathedral of St. Philip Thursday, elected officers to serve during the ensuing three years and heard reports on various activities of the auxiliary. The new officers are shown above with Bishop H. J. Mikell, in charge of the Atlanta diocese. They are: Front row, left to right, Mrs. P. A. Shapard, of Griffin, custodian of the united thanks offering; Mrs. A. H. Sterne, of Atlanta, the retiring president; Mrs. Marshall J. Ellis, of Macon, president; Mrs. John F. Heard, of Atlanta, vice president. Back row, left to right: Mrs. Harold D. Castleberry, of Gainesville, vice president; Mrs. Fred S. Barklow, of Marietta, secretary of supply work; Mrs. Walter J. Grace Jr., of Macon, treasurer; Bishop Mikell, Mrs. Mary King, of Atlanta, educational secretary; Mrs. E. B. Harrold, of Macon, secretary, and Mrs. Banks Young, of Columbus, vice president.

Election of officers of the Episcopal diocese of Atlanta, and of the women's auxiliary marked the closing, Thursday, of the diocese council and convention at Pro-cathedral of St. Philip, presided over by Bishop H. J. Mikell.

The diocese of Atlanta includes all of north Georgia, and more than 150 men and 350 women, all prominent in the affairs of the diocese, were in attendance at the session. Judge E. E. Pomeroy, of Atlanta, was chosen vice chancellor of the diocese at the council session, while H. M. Heckman, of Athens, was named treasurer, and Frank N. Bone, of Milledgeville, was elected chairman of the finance committee.

Officers to serve during the next three years were named as follows by the women's auxiliary: Mrs. Marshall J. Ellis, of Macon, president; Mrs. Harold D. Castleberry, of Gainesville, vice president; Mrs. Fred S. Barklow, of Marietta, secretary of supply work; and Mrs. Mary King, of Atlanta, education secretary.

Auxiliary members gave a luncheon and reception Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Shepard Bryan, 2702 Peachtree road, in honor of Mrs. A. H. Sterne, of Atlanta, the retiring president. It was voted to furnish a room in the Fort Valley Industrial school infirmary in honor of the work done by Mrs. Sterne during her three years as auxiliary head.

Among the speakers at the closing session of the auxiliary convention were Mrs. Grace Lindley, of New York, national executive secretary of the auxiliary, who talked on "Place of Women in the Church"; and Fannie Dewart, executive secretary of the Appleton Church Home at Macon. The Fort Valley Normal Glee Club presented a group of spirituals.

K. Allen, under a legislative act to give Long control over the board. The new jury lost no time in removing from office persons hostile to the Long administration.

The first of these to go was Matt G. Smith, president of the old elected board. He was replaced as head of the jury by Dr. Clarence A. Lorio, the dictator's parish political leader.

162 JAPANESE DIE IN CHAHAR STRIFE
An independent state and invade Manchukuo.

Continued Westward Drive Predicted by JAP OBSERVERS
PEIPING, Jan. 25. (Friday)—Japanese military sources reported today 162 of their troops had been killed and nearly 200 wounded in fighting with Chinese forces along the Jehol-Chahar frontier.

This startling report was considered apparently an exaggeration by impartial observers here. The complete Chinese losses remained unchecked, but between 40 and 50 persons are believed to have been slain.

Various Japanese sources in Peiping and in Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, indicated further action to the westward by Japanese troops was likely.

One apparently authentic report said additional Japanese troops were being moved up to the border of Chahar, Chinese province which lies next to Manchukuo.

Despite these reports, Chinese sources here and in Nanking insisted the border dispute had been settled by negotiation. Confusion marked the entire situation.

Japanese bombing planes roared out again yesterday over the Mongolian plains, dealing death, according to reports reaching here. Earlier the Japanese military attaché's office in Peiping asserted, however, that "no further action is likely."

While General Sung Chen-yuan, Chinese governor of Chahar, conferred here yesterday with Hoy In-ching, chairman of the Peiping military council, dispatches from Kaifeng near the border between Mongolia and 500 more soldiers arrived to reinforce Japanese troops near Kuyuan, in Chahar.

The Japanese military authorities here admitted their forces occupied Kuyuan, which is 75 miles north of Kaifeng and outside the Great Wall.

Rengo dispatches to Tokyo said the Japanese occupied "several" obscure villages.

The Japanese version said trouble started along the Chahar border January 22, when the Nagami regiment, advancing from Shao Chang, northeast of Hsichatze, met Chinese militia armed with machine guns. After fighting, in which both sides suffered casualties, the militia was dispersed.

Airplanes were sent into action the following day. An artillery bombardment followed, under cover of which the Japanese infantry advanced.

JAPAN NOT TO OCCUPY CHINESE LAND, TOKYO SAYS
TOKYO, Jan. 25. (Friday)—(AP)—Fresh trouble in the zone of Manchukuo's vaguely marked western frontier was indicated by unconfirmed reports from that section, a Rengo News Agency dispatch today from Hsinking said.

Manchukuan troops patrolling near Bor Nor lake on the frontier, the Manchukuan sources stated, were fired on by Mongols. Some casualties were suffered by the Manchukuan forces, who returned the fire.

The clash was not connected with Sino-Japanese fighting on the border of Manchukuo and Mongolia.

Although outer Mongolia is considered under the domination of soviet Russia, there were no indications that either Japanese or Russians were involved in the fresh incident.

Reports from Hsinking said the Japanese command, unimpressed by pleas from frightened Chinese residents that it halt military operations, was determined to "deal drastically" with Sung Chen-yuan (governor of the Chinese province of Chahar) as soon as he manifests hostility to Japan and Manchukuo.

Government officials, however, received reports from Peiping that Sung, promising prompt compliance with Japanese demands, had explained the failure of his forces to leave Jehol was due to misunderstood orders. The officials predicted speedy settlement of the issue.

Rengo reported the advancing Japanese forces occupied several small villages, but failed to indicate whether they were on the Jehol or Chahar side of the Great Wall.

The Tokyo war office spokesman, however, said the Japanese offensive would not enter Chinese territory.

Dispute over the actual boundary was partly responsible for the clash, it was said here.

Druggists Organize.
Atlanta Co-Operative Druggists' Association was formed Thursday night when representatives of 18 independent Atlanta drug stores met at a downtown hotel to devise means of collective buying and advertising. Dr. Preston Summers, owner of the East

Senate Court Vote Expected Next Week
WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. (AP)—The senate today assured itself of a vote on the World Court early next week after it had adopted, near nightfall, the Vandenberg reservation.

The reservation, by Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, states that in entering the Hague tribunal for settlement of international disputes does not depart from its traditional policy of not interfering in internal affairs of other nations, nor does it relinquish its time-honored attitude toward "purely American questions."

Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, announced the pro-court forces accepted the reservation, not because they believed it was necessary, but because it embodied a principle "in which all of us concur."

Foreign observers immediately picked the change in the finance department as most significant.

Sought Stabilization.
Jung, who visited the United States in the spring of 1933, has been in favor of stabilizing the lira at the present rate of exchange. He has urged balancing of the budget.

Succeeding him is that old seagoing Admiral De Revel, who commanded Italy's fleet during the World War. After it was given the title "Duke of the Sea."

Another curious phase of the "changing of the guard," as one government spokesman described it, was the elevation of the labor leader, Rossini, to the agriculture post. Rossini spent many years in the United States as labor agitator.

Out with nine other undersecretaries went Alberto Asquini, minister of corporations, who superintended from this side preliminary negotiations for the projected bilateral trade treaty between the United States and Italy.

The sweeping change even extended to the governorship of Rome. Giuseppe Bottai, former minister of communications, replacing Prince Francesco Boncompagni.

Rep. Cox Is Alarmed By Works Bill Powers
WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. (AP)—Powers transferred to the president in the new $4,880,000,000 works bill were described on the house floor today by Representative Cox, democrat, of Georgia, as "inconsistent with the spirit of American liberty and violation of the constitution."

The Georgian said the bill was an outright delegation of legislative power vested alone in congress and which congress had no right to give to another.

"It is not what I fear the president will do in the administration of the act which disturbs me," Cox told his colleagues, "but it is that which he is empowered to do. No man could be great enough or good enough (and the president is as good as god) as great as the greatest and best of men) to be permanently entrusted with all the powers of government, and this renewal of extraordinary power granted under unusual and extraordinary conditions goes a long way toward permanency of the grant."

Ickes Strikes Back At Congress Enemies
WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. (AP)—Showing the strain of recent stormy days, Harold L. Ickes struck back today at the enemies he has made as secretary of the interior, public works administrator and oil administrator.

He grimly called the roll of his foes at a press conference made tense by an order that no reporter was to leave until after the meeting ended. These enemies he termed "a choice collection—contractors, oil interests, public utility interests."

"I've had to say 'No' on a good many occasions to applications for jobs and projects I couldn't comply with."

He paid his respects to congressmen who have complained that he failed to show them the proper politeness with: "If that's all the criticism of the public works bill during my administration I can stand that."

One concession he made. He was sorry, he said, that his press section had circulated a magazine article attacking Attorney-General Cummings, Postmaster General Farley, and Senator Harrison.

RELIEF MEASURE PASSED BY HOUSE
Snell was declaring heatedly that the chief executive was attempting to influence legislation in the house. Senator James Couzens, said the man who wrote the works bill "ought to be hanged—not in effigy but physically."

The expressions were typical of the outcries against the terms of the bill. The chief complaints were that the measure would place the government more deeply in competition with business and that the proposed $50 monthly wage to be paid was too low.

Administration whips cracked over the heads of new democrats who often have been described as "unpredictable" and they swung into line to batter down two amendments designed especially to remedy the above complaints.

"Scab" Pay Charged.
One amendment by Representative Samuel Pettengill, designed to prevent government controlled corporations created under the act from competing with private enterprise was swamped 172 to 91.

The boisterous house defeated the proposal in the face of warnings from republicans and democrats alike that the measure as drafted would further alarm private capital and retard recovery. The administration spokesmen replied by calling attention to Mr. Roosevelt's statement that the government would operate to provide a minimum of competition to private business under the act.

The next fight occurred over an amendment by Representative William P. Connery to force the government to pay the prevailing wage rates to workers employed by the act. The amendment was defeated 129 to 131. The vote was preceded by assertions from Connery and others that the proposed wage was "starvation" and "scab" pay.

Chairman James Buchanan of the appropriations committee, who guided

ATLANTA'S THEATERS

"David Copperfield"

Plays at Grand Today

A film so ambitious as to challenge comparison with any in the history of motion pictures comes to Loew's Grand theater today. This is the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of Charles Dickens' best-loved masterpiece, "David Copperfield," with 65 stars and featured players, expertly cast to impersonate the immortal figures of the tale.

So wide is the range of "David Copperfield" that three actors were needed to impersonate the title role. The first is tiny Eileen Inghes, who made her camera debut at the ripe old age of four days and 11 hours; she is the infant David, whose birth prematurely is the outcome of crocheting Aunt Betsey's visit to the Copperfield household.

Ten-year-old Freddy Bartholomew is the next David—the youngster who goes on a visit to Yarmouth, and meets a series of characters who are immortal—Barkis, who is courting David's nurse, Peggoty, and to whom he proposes by the quaint remark, "Barkis is willing." Mrs. Gummidge, the doleful widow, and Little Emily, the flowerlike child, an orphan of the fishing village.

Frank Lawton is the grown-up David, who encounters the scheming Uriah Heep, the imprudent but optimistic Mr. Micawber, and finally Dora, whom he marries.

Others in the cast are W. C. Fields, as Mr. Micawber; Lionel Barrymore, as Dan Peggoty; Maureen O'Sullivan, as Dora; Madge Evans, as Aunt Betsey; Edna May Oliver, as Mrs. Wickfield; Elizabeth Allan, as Mrs. Copperfield; Roland Young, as Uriah Heep; Basil Rathbone, as Mr. Murdstone; Eliza Lancheater (Mrs. Charles Laughton), as Clickett; Jean Cadell, as Mrs. Micawber; Lennox Pawle, as Mr. Dick; Violet Kemble Cooper, as Jane Murdstone; Una O'Connor, as Mrs. Gummidge; Hugh Williams, as Steerforth; Herbert Mundin, as Barkis; Florine McKinney, as Little Emily; and Hugh Walpole, as the vicar.

"David Copperfield" was produced by David O. Selznick with George Cukor as director. This pair will be remembered as the makers of "Bill of Divorcement" and "Little Women." Hugh Walpole, one of England's best-known modern authors, and an authority on Dickens, made the screen adaptation in co-operation with Howard Estabrook, who wrote the scenario for "Cimarron."

"The Little Minister" With Hepburn, at Fox

Starring the brilliant Katharine Hepburn, Sir James M. Barrie's much-loved romance, "The Little Minister," comes to the Fox theater today as a vibrant, thrilling and deeply moving romance.

Never before has Miss Hepburn been afforded as colorful and dynamic a role as that of Babbie in "The Little Minister." The dashing, romantic gypsy girl, long enshrined in the hearts of the world, is perfect human material for the rich talents of the star of "Morning Glory," "Sister" and the unforgettable "Little Women" of a year ago.

John Beal, one of the finest of Hollywood's younger actors, is seen as Gavin Disheart, the little dominie whom Babbie loves. Alan Hale is the temperamental ruffian Rob Dow. The talented Frank Conroy plays Lord Rintoul, her guardian. Other notable and popular figures in Miss Hepburn's supporting cast are Donald Crisp, Lumsden Hare, Andy Clyde, Billy Watson, Beryl Mercer, Dorothy Stickney and Reginald Denny.

The famous role of Babbie gives Katharine Hepburn every opportunity to display her extraordinary and versatile talents. Advance reports are that it takes its place supremely in the gallery of brilliant character portraits she has painted for the talking screen. Lovingly, lovingly, lovingly, a glittering figure in the human lives of the Scotch people of Thrums, Babbie is a part worthy of the great stars who have revealed in the role on the legitimate stage. Older players will remember Maude Adams, who played the part nearly 2,000 times from coast to coast.

Never has a motion picture been made with more devoted care than "The Little Minister."

"Night in Monte Carlo"

Brings New Features

Varied and numerous new attractions have been secured for the new version of "Night in Monte Carlo," carnival, cabaret and dance to be presented by Yaarah Temple at the Shrine mosque on Peachtree street every night next week.

Chairman W. N. Daniel, in charge of the entertainment, said Thursday night that several surprise features had been arranged for the amusement of the customers, among them a "Duck Pond" which, while surprisingly original in its working, is held as a deep secret as to detail.

The tables in the ballroom, Mr. Daniel said, will be arranged this time within the cabaret enclosure with the elaborate floor show given in the horseshoe center and dancing to the music of a popular orchestra also on the main floor.

The doors for the "Night in Monte Carlo" open each night at 8 o'clock and the entertainment continues until 1 a. m. Attractions are so varied in nature that everyone is sure to find just the kind of amusement liked best, Chairman Daniel stated.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have learned that quick and lasting relief can be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves nor cutting remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts lifeless. To end Piles an internal medicine should be used to stimulate the circulation, and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonard was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for hundreds of patients with a mercurious record of success and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist with a rigid money back guarantee.

So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when Jacobs Drug Stores say "No matter what kind of Piles you have, one box of HEM-ROID tablets will show you the safe and real way to get rid of your Pile misery or money back." (adv.)

New Shirley Temple

Picture at Paramount

Shirley Temple, most sensational screen discovery of the year, at last has "the perfect screen vehicle." That, at any rate, is the gist of enthusiastic advance accounts on Fox Film's "Bright Eyes" coming to the Paramount theater, where it will begin an engagement today.

The dramatic story of "Bright Eyes" was suggested to David Butler, director, by a real-life incident occurring at a commercial airport near Los Angeles. He told it to Sal M. Wurtz, Fox Film producer, who at once grew enthusiastic about the idea as a vehicle for the remarkable child star.

Butler and Edwin Burke, famous screen writer, collaborated on the story, which was then adapted to the screen by William Conselman.

Butler himself has directed "Bright Eyes," and, according to advance reports, has done one of the most notable jobs of his career.

Among features of the new picture is Shirley's newest song number, a rousing song especially written for her by the team of Richard Whiting and Sidney Clare. Its title is "On the Good Ship Lollipop."

Shirley, it is reported, was overjoyed when she was informed that James Dunn would again be her pal and leading man in "Bright Eyes." It was with Dunn that she appeared in "Rabbits Take a Bow" and "Stand Up and Cheer."

Other members of Shirley's supporting cast are Jane Darwell, who recently scored a sensational hit in "The White Parade"; Lois Wilson, Judith Allen, Theodore von Eltz, Dorothy Christy, Charles Sellon, Jane Withers, Brandon Hurst, Walter Johnson and George Irving.

Capitol Offers Seven

Amateurs in Contest

An added attraction on the Capitol theater stage tonight at 9 o'clock is the weekly amateur contest, at which three prizes are offered those who compete.

Amateurs scheduled for appearance tonight include J. B. McIntyre, Eddie Evans, Susan Gray, Guy Stevens, Feril Wing, Edgar Byrd and Tommy Thompson. Each will offer a variety of entertainment.

The Capitol now offers on the screen Zane Grey's "West of the Pecos," starring Richard Dix, while on the stage is the vaudeville revue, "Rhythm on Parade," which is proving a pleasing stage entertainment. This program will be offered through Saturday.

Starting next Sunday, the Capitol will make a complete change in program offering on the screen "One Hour Late," starring a large cast of screen favorites, including Helen Twilvetrees, Conrad Nagel, Joe Morrison, Arline Judge and Toby Wing. The new stage show also starting at the same time will be "Hollywood Follies," featuring a cast of comedians.

'Neighbor Knowledge' Need Of Nations, Says Dr. Shotwell

Columbia Professor at Athens Says U.S. Should Use League Pact as Peace Basis.

By JULIAN HARRIS.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 24.—The necessity for "neighbor knowledge" among nations was the undercurrent of two notable addresses made here—by Dr. James T. Shotwell at the University of Georgia and the other today—by Dr. Wallace on the League of Nations.

Dr. Shotwell, who is a leading member of the faculty of Columbia University and the author of a half dozen authoritative volumes on peace and related subjects, has been for 10 years a trustee of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and director of its division of economics and history. His obvious fitness as one who can intelligently discuss the peace movement in all its implications is complemented by his ability and spontaneity as a speaker. And the scope of his knowledge concerning the innumerable ramifications of his subject fascinated audiences which overflowed the University chapel on two occasions.

Isolation Out Moded.

In brief, Dr. Shotwell believes that economics plus scientific progress has made the nations of this tiny particle of the universe neighbors, and therefore isolation has outmoded as a means of achieving constantly amicable relations. Neither nationalism, which is another term for isolation, nor internationalism has the blessings of Dr. Shotwell as a program for peaceful relationships and a return of reasonable prosperity.

Efforts at disarmament have been, he thinks, both futile and misdirected because the measuring rod was used to create the wrong standard. Instead of using Germany as a point of departure for disarmament, the Washington naval conference considered Great Britain and the United States.

This has resulted, Dr. Shotwell thinks, in creating among other nations the desire to increase armaments. Believing that economics and politics must take the same general direction at the same time, Dr. Shotwell finds the views of Henry Wallace on economics as applicable to the political aspect of the American scene.

Quotes Wallace.

Referring to Mr. Wallace's pamphlet "America Must Choose," in which the secretary of agriculture asserts that the nation's business is at the parting of the ways, Dr. Shotwell said:

"Mr. Wallace writes understandingly. Three paths lie before the nation's business; two of them lead to disaster and the third is difficult to follow. They are economic nationalism on the one hand, internationalism on the other, and a middle course of planned economy, strictly limited and closely controlled."

Dr. Shotwell believes there is only one path which leads to safety, and that one is closely conditioned and confined. Gone are the days of carelessness, displaced by government control, foreign trade no longer combines adventure with profit, home industries have slowed down to the diminishing demand of crippled markets, and there is not enough work to go around.

The foregoing summary pictures accurately Dr. Shotwell's estimate of a new America.

"These conditions in combination mark the beginning of a new age of American history, that of the machine, Dr. Shotwell said. The two great periods which preceded it mastered the material environment of life. First in agriculture and then in industry. New Era has to master the still more stubborn obstacles of economic maladjustment."

During the first age of American history, that of the conquest of the continent, the problems of our country were peculiar to itself. Isolation was the first condition of its history. Conditions have rapidly changed, and now we find the secretary of agriculture warning us against economic isolation which is but another term for economic nationalism.

James T. Shotwell.

"As the representative of the farming section of the country, and especially of that great agricultural empires which lies west of the Mississippi, Mr. Wallace might have been expected to argue for isolation along lines of the traditional policies of the middle west. Instead, he warns the farmers of today that because they work on a margin of profit so narrow in the best of times, the loss of the world market would make it impossible for many of them to make a living off their farms."

The second choice before the country is "internationalism," and Dr. Shotwell thinks this "need not delay us even for criticism. If it is meant as a preference for foreign interests over those of America. The chief danger lies in the exploitation of those business opportunities abroad, which call for support by government policies."

Dr. Shotwell believes that "fortunately the country is now on its guard against this kind of venture."

The third way out is that of planned economy, not only in farming but even more in trade, commerce and finance. Dr. Shotwell believes that under planned economy the projects and experiments are bound to fail in part, but the risks of pioneering must be taken. He asserted that the conditions which the nation now faces are the result of the World War, to which he refers as "the ultimate and continuing cause" of the world's manifold ills.

Before choosing one of the three roads mentioned, economic America must not forget that economics do not exist apart from politics, asserted Dr. Shotwell. He added: "The economic structure is insecure wherever it cannot rest upon solid political foundations."

Three Courses Open.

The fundamental problem in politics is not unlike that in economics, said Dr. Shotwell, for it is also the question of what are the real interests of the United States in the world today. He added: "Again, as in the field of economics, there are three theoretical possibilities, the same three as in economics (1) policies of isolation, (2) policies of internationalism, (3) plans for participation in international plans under strictly limited conditions."

There is no use discussing internationalism, Dr. Shotwell thinks, and internationalism no solution. Then followed a discussion of ways and means of peace.

"Ever since the world was disclosed by man's eyes, the anarchy of the national state system of the nineteenth century," said Dr. Shotwell, "the chief problem of statesmanship has been the creation of a new world order and the erection of institutions capable of embodying it in permanent form."

Instead of international anarchy there should be international co-operation; instead of the arbitrament of arms, agreement by conference and judgment by a court; instead of the strategy of war, the strategy of peace. Already it can be said that for more than a decade of troubled years of international post-war adjustment the peace movement, with its League of Nations and Kellogg pacts, has held its own. Now, however, it is at grips with its fate. It is this fact which constitutes the supreme crisis in the international world today.

"The issue before us is whether we shall have to turn back the march of progress and accept once more the anarchy of the old state system, with its acceptance of war as the instrument of policy. It is the test of human capacity to do the things we know must yet be done if civilization is to be saved from the ruin inherent in a return to the old system of things."

Peace Move Halted.

The peace movement is retarded, in Dr. Shotwell's opinion, by the tendency of peace advocates to assert and believe uncompromising principles in connection with the peace movement today as in connection with the other great movements of revolution or reform in the past.

"As a matter of fact," asserted Dr. Shotwell, "the peace situation is almost exact parallel to that of the history of theology."

"The peace forces war among themselves with an order fully to be distinguished from that of their attack upon militarism. Pacifists of the left wing have refused to accept as a basis for their movement the national defense. Others have rejected as dangerous delusions the institutions which have ensnared the hopes of whole nations. When united, these forces vastly outweigh that really negligible section of the civilized world which cherishes war as an ideal."

Neutrality as a barrier against war was analyzed by Dr. Shotwell. He stated that in most people's minds neutrality is a synonym for peace. For a neutral nation is one which keeps out of war in which others are engaged.

"But there is another side to this status of neutrality, the side of neutral rights," said Dr. Shotwell. "For instance, two of the three wars, since the Revolution, which the United States has waged with the European powers have arisen out of our insistence on neutral rights. The War of 1812 and American participation in the World War were both due to the fact that the United States insisted on its rights of peaceful trade at a time when other nations were at war, was drawn into the war itself. To be absolutely neutral in connection as well as thought—to reserve the formula of President Wilson—means accepting self-denying ordi-stances which this country has not thought of applying."

Dr. Shotwell asserted that "the weakness of the peace movement lies in its confusion of counsel, yet it is the great ideal force in the world today." This assertion, he said, may seem strange "to those who have seen the response of Italy and Germany to the glorification of force."

Appeals Would Fail.

"But," continued Dr. Shotwell, "if peace could be effectively organized, not in the interest of any one nation or group of nations, the flaming appeals of Hitler would burn themselves out in futile words. It is because peace has been so ineffective that the religion of patriotism is a menace."

"If, therefore, the United States is to have a peace policy, it must find a definite basis for its action. Systematic dealings with other nations. For this purpose an organization is necessary, and the one organization which is the League of Nations. But can the covenant of the League of Nations be interpreted or revised so as to make possible the participation of the United States? Without either interpretation or revision to establish a law of the League that America can accept, the whole plan breaks down."

"Fortunately, a movement is under way to revise or re-interpret the covenant, or to admit a new adjustment to the League of nations states. Surely a way can be devised for removing the obstacles which prevent the nation chiefly responsible for the covenant and the pact of Paris from taking its full place in the council of nations."

The impression was gained from Dr. Shotwell's talks that he was hopeful that proper formula would be discovered. If this happened, then both Germany and Japan might find a path to the League.

Discussed Japan.

Dr. Shotwell closed his address today with a discussion of the relations of Japan and the United States. He said two interpretations had been placed on Japan's denunciation of the 1911 treaty. The first is that Japan regarded the treaty as one of national prestige, of "face." The second interpretation assigned it was as a means to its position as a great power.

"There is no outstanding subject of quarrel in the economic or material relations of Japan and the United States which would justify political action," he said. "The only issues are those of prestige to which I have just referred. And of policies with reference to the Asiatic mainland."

It is not additional ships which the United States needs to offer to Japan, but something which has no value in the eyes of Japan. The United States should offer something to conditions which I shall mention later, to do unto the injustice of the exclusion act. This is a gesture of friendship which would not make any material change in the actual number of Japanese immigrants, because if they were on the quota basis they would not be admitted. It would, however, take off a brand of inferiority which Japan has sensed in the act, and end a feeling of inferiority against the United States."

More on Foot.

While Dr. Shotwell did not mention it, he must be aware of a movement on foot in California among leading citizens to petition congress for the elimination of Japan from the exclusion act. It was California's United States Senator Shortridge, who, produced by newspapermen for cost pressed for the inclusion of Japan in the exclusion act on terms different from those applied to the nationals of greater and lesser powers.

Dr. Shotwell believes that as compensation for the suggested "gesture," Japan should, first of all, undertake to raise the standard of wages and conditions of industry in Japan. He engaged in what is regarded as "unfair competition" by the United States.

"This could be done," asserted Dr. Shotwell, "through the international labor organization at Geneva, of which Japan remains a member and which the United States joined in 1934."

"At a single blow there would be an elimination of two of the main sources of racial and economic irritation. Negotiations along these lines would be the practical application of the policy of the 'good neighbor'."

Status Not Settled.

"Further, it must be noted that the exact status of Manchukuo is not finally settled upon by Japan. As for the relations of Japan with the whole mainland, the 'open door' there is obviously room for friendly negotiations on this point as well."

Dr. Shotwell believed that while the United States and Great Britain could not surrender their interests or yield their place in the orient, they can plan for the future, steadily their forces with sign of co-operative influences upon the part of Japan and every decided gain in the authority of the one great people of the orient who are schooling themselves for democracy."

At the night session Thursday, Hon. John Dickinson, assistant secretary of commerce, Washington, spoke on "The Control of Production" and H. G. Moulton, director of the Institute for Economic Research, used as his subject "The Economy of Scarcity vs. the Economy of Plenty."

Known as one of the members of the "brain trust," Dickinson referred to that group opening his address. "Critics may express dissatisfaction with what they are pleased to paragon as the experiments of the 'brain trust,'" said the assistant secretary of commerce. "Yet that policy of experimentation and the determination which lies behind it to bring our economic working order system to a new level of efficiency is the only way to make a more inquisitive examination into the operation of our economic life. The one great people of the orient who are schooling themselves for democracy."

This over simplification in our economic thinking, begins naturally enough, according to Mr. Dickinson. "A tendency to seize upon over-simplified solutions and to demand a rigidly logical application of some single favored specific like sound money, or inflation, or low prices, or high prices in a way that is again reminiscent of the old-time physician's confidence in some remedy such as calomel or phlebotomy."

"The cure-all is to be distrusted," said the speaker. "We need to acquire flexibility in our thinking to ward the even more complicated problems of economic health."

Mr. Dickinson then entered a discussion of the so-called rigid and flexible prices, and revealed that their behavior in the matter of relative frequency of price changes leads them to the two well-defined groups mentioned. As he explained, he mentioned that many of the "administrative prices" remain during a depression at something near the pre-depression level, while production falls off to a fraction of its former level, and on the other hand the flexible prices all to a level which wholly alters the picture. He said that the rigid prices, while production falls off, remain at practically its former volume.

Mr. Dickinson closed his talk with a generous praise of Dr. Moulton's aid and spirit in accumulating essential facts.

Dr. Moulton, in his address, entirely non-controversial, advocated an array of plenty accompanied by a more

Health Insurance Predicted By Doctors at Athens Meet

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 24.—(P)—Socialized medicine or health insurance is the outstanding current problem in Georgia medicine, some leading physicians of the state said today at the University of Georgia Institute of Public Affairs.

Dr. Stewart R. Roberts, of Atlanta, said health insurance is necessary if adequate medical care is to be furnished to all who are unable to pay for medical service. The burden has become too heavy.

"The United States is the only country without health insurance. Wherever the question has been introduced, organized medicine has fought it, but the rank and file of individual doctors are growing more and more in favor of it for the low income group."

Dr. Charles H. Richardson, of Macon, said: "Those of us who are thinking along these lines are not in a hurry to favor it for the low income group."

Dr. J. A. Redfern, of Albany, said physicians generally are not opposed to socialized medicine for financial reasons. He said, however, that "socialized medicine with its boards which may be politically and machine controlled have proven more expensive."

Dr. Craig Barrow, of Savannah, said the right of corporations to provide health insurance for employees is justified. He cited experiences, which he said, showed such insurance benefited people of low incomes.

Dr. James E. Paulin, of Atlanta, said the average practicing physician is not interested in public health because he "has not been educated to public health thinking."

He added: "Organized medicine, of which public health is an integral part, must take the initiative in health matters and see that logical health programs are put forward and fulfilled."

Disease Affairs, Many.

Dr. Barrow, at a round-table discussion of health affairs, said disease affecting "more than a majority of the population of Georgia has brought about a condition of physical and medical deficiency in the state."

Pleading for an active public health program, the Savannah physician said the existence of disease has brought about a condition of physical and medical deficiency in the state. The seriousness of health conditions in the state also was emphasized by Dr. W. M. Montague, of Marietta University, another speaker.

Dr. John R. Perry, 80, prominent retired Atlanta physician, father of Reese Perry, Fulton county tax assessor and funeral descendant of Governor Ben Perry, of North Carolina, died Thursday morning at a private hospital. He had been ill more than a year. He resided at 170 Thirteenth street, N. E.

Dr. Perry was born July 26, 1854. He was educated in the public schools of Gainesville and later studied medicine at the old Atlanta Eclectic Medical school, one of a leading college for physicians. After practicing medicine in Gainesville several years, he moved to Atlanta and continued his practice until forced by ill health to retire more than a year ago.

He was a member of the Odd Fellows' organization and was active in church work.

He is survived, in addition to Reese Perry, by Boyd Perry, of New York, and Marvin Perry, of Hamlet, N. C.; three granddaughters, Misses Pauline and Nancy Perry, of Atlanta, and Miss Angeline Perry, of New York; and two grandsons, Boyd Perry and Stuart Perry, both of New York city.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock Saturday morning at Spring Hill with the Rev. Fred L. Gibson officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

FIREMEN'S AID SOUGHT IN HUNT FOR CHILD

A mother's plea for her four-year-old daughter, taken from her by the child's father, was addressed to firemen at Station House No. 10, Thursday. Listing the amendment among "attacks" on the constitution, he criticized the idea of attempting to control the "labor" rather than the "employment" of children.

Slaton also attacked "the advance of communism and other 'isms,' except Americanism, which invade college walls and student organizations."

New Jersey Visitor Directs Play Produced by Princeton Group

By Sally Forth.

THOSE having had the privilege of meeting Mrs. Edwin J. Morris, of Princeton, N. J., declare her one of the most interesting as well as charming visitors to this city in some time. As the guest of her close friend, Mrs. Madison Bell, in the Biltmore apartments, Mrs. Morris is receiving numerous social courtesies, and at each affair she is the center of admiration. Slender in figure, and possessing features of a delicate refined type, the visitor wears the smartest of costumes in a chic manner, characteristic of the woman who is widely traveled and familiar with cosmopolitan life. Appealing, indeed, is her mass of soft gray hair, worn in becoming ringlet effect, which serves to emphasize the charm and dignity of this engaging person.

In Princeton, where Mrs. Morris maintains a beautiful country estate just outside of the city, she enjoys unusual prestige among the socially prominent and the cultural-minded. She belongs to a group known as the Princeton Community Players. Speaking to a group of Atlantans at a recent luncheon, Mrs. Morris is requested to tell something of the work and purpose of the Princeton Community Players.

Composed of several members of Princeton University faculty and their wives, the players' group also includes townspeople of Princeton interested in dramatics. The purpose of the group is to further the community spirit and to find those individuals possessing dramatic talent. The players give three productions annually, preceded by a stunt night, at which the members are given opportunity to do a brief stunt or a sketch, exhibiting talents that will reveal their ability.

As director of casting for the players, it is the duty of Mrs. Morris to select those most suitable for the various roles required in forthcoming productions. In this position Mrs. Morris has shown unusual ability and knowledge of hidden talent that needs to be developed and often-times leads to a future success for some American actor or actress.

Although she has never pursued the career of a professional, Mrs. Morris has shown a marked gift in acting herself. In the role of Mrs. Maxwell in the presentation of "Cock Robin" by the Princeton Community Players, she received enthusiastic comment. But perhaps her greatest ability lies in directing, for in this capacity she recently supervised the presentation of Anatole France's "The Man Who Married the Dumb Wife."

THE fact that "love always finds a way" is emphasized in the recent reconciliation of a certain debutante and her swain, who stopped having dates because of some trivial misunderstanding. In order to avoid meeting the ardent beau at social affairs where deb and their escorts were invited, the deb always made inquiry as to whether the particular boy friend was on the guest list, and she declined the invitation if his name appeared on the roster.

A very close friend of the swain's family entertained in honor of the deb recently, and she was positive that he would be invited. She told her mother she would refuse to go, but finally acceded to her mother's plea and accepted the party invitation. Her escort for the party was an out-of-town man who knew that the aforementioned

Atlanta Children's Theater Guild

Miss Betty Crandall will present the Atlanta Children's Theater Guild in a double bill of two one-act plays, "Little Women" and "Tom Sawyer," on about the middle of March.

Members of the guild who were cast in minor roles, and those who played minor roles but who have proven ability, will be cast in the leading roles in these plays. The popularity of these two selections has necessitated the opening of the membership to newcomers, therefore, all casting has not been completed. For information, call Hemlock 8123-7.

Angeline de Golia will play the part of Jo, in "Little Women." She will be supported by June Walton as Beth; Dorothy Williams as Meg; Mary Cecil Brown as Amy, and Lucia Bellinger as Mrs. March.

"Tom Sawyer" will be interpreted by Grady Ridgeway; Bessie Bellinger as Becky; Mack Robinson will play the part of Huckleberry Finn, and Billy Corley as Joe Hollis; Marylin Love as Amy Lawrence; Ellen Evans as Aunt Polly; Frances Wheeler plays Mrs. Wallace; Lucille Bowen takes the role of Mrs. Thatcher, and Betty Morgan interprets the role of Miss Dobbs; and Anita Aspinwall ably handles the part of the Widow Douglas.

Mrs. King Hostess.

Mrs. John B. King entertained the members of her bridge club at her home in Oakland City Saturday. High score was won by Miss Mary Hill, score, Mrs. L. C. Crawford, and Mrs. Robert L. Stocks cut consolation.

Those present were: Misses Mary Hill, Clifford Greer, Vera Mae Moon, Catherine Ray, Sarah Smith, Katherine Carter, Mesdames James T. Clark, David Greer, Marjorie Head, L. C. Crawford, Jack Lunsford, Robert L. Stocks and Mrs. King.

The next meeting will be held February 22 at the home of Mrs. James T. Clark in Hapeville.

swain had been going with the debbie, but was utterly oblivious to the fact that there was an existing coolness.

Imagine the deb's surprise when she walked into the living room to keep her date with the visiting gentleman, and was confronted by the former beau, who had accompanied the visitor. Neither the deb nor the swain gave the situation away, proving conclusively that they were good sports by exchanging greetings and attending the dance together. Up to this day, the visiting cavalier has no idea that he was the means of bringing the couple together.

AFTER having added her charming presence to social affairs here for two weeks, Miss Viola Lallande returns to her home in New Orleans on Sunday. A fortnight is a very short visit for one who finds as many demands upon her time as does Miss Lallande, for each time she has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Norville Wilson at their Park circle residence here, her circle of friends has been greatly augmented.

It seems that something very important and exciting is taking this popular belle back to the Crescent City, but Sally isn't privileged to tell you about it just yet. Of course, you know that Mardi Gras is a scarce five weeks off, and so many exciting things happen at that thrilling time! And it's hardly probable that New Orleans could stage its brilliant carnival without the aid of one so prominent and popular socially.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will go to New Orleans to visit Miss Lallande at her home on De Soto street for the gala occasion, and they will form the inspiration for numerous social courtesies. Their hostess has planned a large cocktail party preceding one of the gay balls, and they will be included on the guest lists for the parties planned by the social clubs and the host of friends of Miss Lallande.

Miss Frances Clyde Hammond Becomes Bride of Mr. Pickett

MRS. MARION PICKETT.

Combining beauty and dignity was the marriage of Miss Frances Clyde Hammond and Booty Marion Pickett which took place Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the Stewart Avenue Methodist church. Dr. W. G. Crowley performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The church was decorated with palms, smilax, seven-branched candelabra and floor baskets holding calla lilies and gladioli. Tall candelabra held lighted tapers to form an archway down the center aisle of the church, through which the wedding party passed, and the candlelight added a glow to the scene.

Before the ceremony, a musical program was rendered by Mrs. J. B. Smith, the organist, and Miss Blanche Walden, a soloist. During the ceremony "Liebestraum" by Wagner, was played and as a recessional Mendelssohn's Wedding March was rendered. Mrs. Sylvia Evans acted as matron of honor, Mrs. Hazel Bradbury was maid of honor, Jane Gilbert Poole acted as junior bridesmaid. They were gowned alike in ice-blue taffeta made along old-fashioned lines of ankle length. They carried satin muffs covered in pink sweet peas and sweetheart roses showered with valley lilies. carried a basket of sweetheart roses. Master Louis Williams Jr., was ring bearer and was dressed in a white satin suit and carried a white satin pillow.

Claud Pickett, brother of the groom was best man, and Walter Hinson was groomsmen. Luther Bradbury and Jimmie Dickinson were ushers. The lovely bride entered with her godfather, Thomas E. Guthrie, who gave her in marriage. Her stately beauty was enhanced by her exquisite gown of duchesse satin made along princess lines. The bodice featured a high cowl neckline and the sleeves were long and tight, coming to a point over the wrists. The skirt was fashioned on the bias and ended in a train in the back. Her veil of illusion tulle, made in a cap shape, was attached at each side with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried an exquisite bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. W. T. Hammond, mother of the bride, was gowned in tea rose velvet trimmed in sequins and her carriage was pink roses and valley lilies. Mrs. J. L. Pickett, mother of the bridegroom, was becomingly gowned in black velvet with erud lace. Her shoulder corsage was of red roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Pickett were at home to their friends at their apartment on Mayland avenue.

MILLS OF THE GODS

By Melville Baker and John S. Kirkland.

With the "depression" comes the gradual ruin of the vast Hastings Flaw Co. Mary Hastings, some twenty years of age, summons all her children and grandchildren to America from Europe, where they have been squandering the great Hastings fortune, to take them to turn over some of the $20,000,000 trust fund to save the plant and to keep the workers and their wives from starving. The class refuses to do so, and the workers send a delegation headed by young Jim Devin to interview for them. NOW GO ON WITH THIS STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

The answer from the crowd was obvious. "No! Send up a delegation!"

Mary returned to the board room to hear the answers of her family. She could read the reply in their averted faces. They were going to refuse to help. Mary sighed—she should have expected this from—

But now Devin and his delegation cleared for admittance. On Burroughs' advice, Willard admitted them into the room. This was Willard's cue. His oratory was good, if pointless.

And, he concluded, "this is the message I want you to carry back to your comrades—my message! Let's fight, my friends—like men and Americans all! Let's rally to the cause of the great ranks of labor, the backbone of our great nation, without which we could not survive!" His voice rose dramatically, but Devin was unimpressed.

"That may be very well, Mr. Hastings, but it doesn't tell us what we can do to find out."

"Well," said Willard irritably, "what is it? Speak up, we're very busy this morning."

"We want to know whether you're closing the mills or not."

Willard stiffened. "Nothing's been decided. We're having a meeting tomorrow. There'll be a statement Saturday."

Devin was politely persistent. "But you must have a pretty good idea now, Mr. Hastings. Listen—the people in this town have worked hard and faithfully for you and your family. Times have been bad and they haven't been able to save much. They're waiting for you to tell them what to do."

Burroughs stepped forward. "Wait a second, Devin. You've been charged a number of times for creating disorder. Is that what you're trying to do now?"

Willard's eyes widened. "I begin to see now—a trouble-maker."

Devin spoke boldly. "I'm representing the workers, and there won't be any trouble unless somebody else starts it!"

"Well, Devin, or whatever your name is, I don't think I care to discuss matters any further with you."

"That's what you say!" snapped Devin.

"Clear out!"

"Listen, Hastings, those men down there sent me up to find out if they're going to keep working or not! I want an answer and I want it quick!" Devin grabbed Willard's arm threateningly.

Outraged, Willard shook himself loose. "Take your hands off me!"

Devin's companion, Barrett, and Burroughs leaped forward, restraining the irate young workman.

"Watch yourself, Jim!" muttered Barrett.

Willard's phone call might have been the starting point of the trouble that followed. Police were on the trail of Jim Devin.

Unrest flowed like a sluggish stream beneath the outward serenity of the Hastings family. Mary Hastings imprisoned herself in her room, refusing to see anyone, while the rest of the clan, expecting Jean and Alex, waited downstairs for some word from the old lady. The tension and pressure were too great for Jean and her brother. They rode to a small inn in the village and proceeded to drink with a consistency born of consistent drinking. Jean, however, was a better imbibor than Alex. Her voice was not thick, nor her eyes glazed. She stared about at the cheap surroundings with mild rony.

"Nice place we found to spend the evening!"

Alex grunted. "Any place is better than the old homestead with those slugs in possession!"

At another table sat Jim Devin, Sarah, Njordstrom and a few of Devin's entourage. They watched Jean and Alex with some suspicion.

"Pretty picture of our best people at day," said Sarah.

Devin frowned. "She shouldn't have come here."

At that moment, Alex, with more than he could hold, toppled from his seat, unconscious. Jean jumped to her feet and tried vainly to lift the inert form. But Alex was too heavy. It was impossible. She summoned the waiter for assistance.

"The waiter eyed the scene disinterestedly. 'Sorry, lady, my party's waitin' for their drinks.' He walked away."

Jean turned back to Alex, slapping his face in an endeavor to arouse him. No use. Everybody in the place watched with malicious enjoyment. It wasn't often they saw the Hastings humiliated. There was a sudden buzz from the crowd as Devin stood and faced Jean.

"Where you going?" snapped Sarah.

Devin didn't answer. Without turning, he walked quickly towards the Hastings table. Sarah rose to follow, but Njordstrom grabbed her arm.

Devin broke loose. "Shut up! Get away! Now, get this, Mr. Hastings! If you double-cross those workmen there'll be trouble and lots of it! You and your family's got plenty of dough tucked away! It won't hurt at a time like this to spread it around a little. I don't care whether it's business or not! There's women and children to be thought of, and I'm not the only guy who's thinking about 'em! These mills had better stay open!" He whirled and started for the door. He stopped, for Jean Hastings was in his path, a satirical smile on her lips.

"Big bad wolf," she murmured.

Under any other circumstances, Devin would have grinned. Instinctively, he knew that Jean wasn't the least bit impressed with the speech he had made. He cast an appraising glance at her slim young figure, then, as the girl stepped aside, strode to the open door. Barrett and Njordstrom, who had comprised the delegation with Devin, followed him. The door slammed behind them. There was immediate confusion.

"Oh," said Henrietta, Willard's sister, "I wish I'd never come!"

"Who is that guy, anyway?" asked Alex.

Willard spoke loudly. "Quiet, everybody! Please! I'll take care of this man! He can't hurt anything!"

"What are you going to do?" Burroughs was wary of Willard's tactics. "Have him thrown in jail!" Willard reached for the telephone.

Burroughs stepped forward, his tone earnest as he spoke. "Take it easy, Mr. Hastings. I don't think I'd phone the police."

"Oh, no?" snapped Willard. "Don't tell me what to do! Did you hear him threaten us?" He picked up the phone. "Operator, this is Mr. Willard Hastings. Get me the chief of police."

Willard's phone call might have been the starting point of the trouble that followed. Police were on the trail of Jim Devin.

LIGHTING THE NIGHT.

V—The Electric Light.

In the year 1816, there was a notice in a newspaper at Baltimore, Md., telling of "gas light without oil, tallow, or wick smoke." People were asked to visit a museum which was in charge of an artist named Peale; and they were told that they could see a "ring beset with gems of light."

Peale was not the first American to make use of gas light. David Melville, of Newport, R. I., had lighted a house with the strange "vapor" ten years before.

The idea spread to Boston, New York and other cities, but it was not welcomed everywhere. Philadelphia was stubbornly against it, the city fathers fearing that gas would cause explosions and do other damage. Philadelphia was 20 years behind Boston, and 18 years behind New York in allowing the use of gas.

Near the beginning of the past century, before the folk of Baltimore were started by the gas light, an English scientist worked on the problem of making an electric light. His name was Humphry Davy, and he made a great battery composed of hundreds of cells. With power from this battery, he sent a current to a point where it "jumped" across an open space. The result was a long and lasting spark which gave a light and was called an "arc light."

Davy's light was too costly for general use, but it pointed the way for others who worked on the problem of electric lights. Soon after the dynamo was invented, arc lights came into wide use for streets and lighthouses. The powerful arc light was not suited for use in homes, however, and it remained for a young American inventor to provide a successful electric light by which people could read and study.

His name was Thomas Edison. After long effort, he brought forth an "incandescent" light, that is a light which was "glowing with heat."

The electric current ran through a thread of carbon in Edison's lamp. The carbon would have been broken by the heat if it had not been sealed inside a glass bulb. Practically all the air had been pumped out of the bulb.

More than half a century has passed since Edison and his helpers made a successful electric light for houses. During that period, many improvements have been made. Tungsten filament has proved better than carbon; and more recently we have found advantage in placing nitrogen gas inside a bulb.

We have gone far toward "lighting the night," and no doubt we shall do much more in time to come. (For History section of your scrap-book.)

Mrs. Sallie Mae Ford Jr., past matron, was first to address the new worthy matron, Mrs. Zimmerman, presenting her a gift from her past matrons, pledging their support during the year. Following a short address by the worthy matron, she was given a shower of flowers and gifts from her family, officers and friends.

Father and Son Are Competitors

sportsman; Trammell Scott with Mike Milligan's Chief, owned by Bob Woodruff, of Atlanta, and C. M. McKinney, of Orlando, with McKinney's Masterpiece. The dogs placed in the order listed above, winning the first three awards. All are pointers. In the center is Dr. George Myhrall, of Atlanta, whose entries in the derby stake placed first and third. He is shown with the winner, Jasper Prince, the only setter to win a first place. Dr. Myhrall's entry won the derby last season. At the right are son and father, Fred Jordan and Charley D. Jordan. Young Jordan lives in Atlanta, while Charles D. is one of the sages of Monticello. He has judged all over the United States and Canada and his son, Fred, has followed him in the field trial game. This year's meeting was a great success and dog lovers are looking to an even greater event next season.

BREAK of the DAY

By Ralph McGill

Well, boys, come and get it. I'm tired listening to all this chiding. We kept a dignified silence here in Atlanta and did not stick out a single neck about this baseball business.

With the result that the boys kept talking about Atlanta's winter pennants. I'm tired of it. And so right slap in the middle of the wintry blasts I have gone out and nailed the gaudy gonfalon to the pennant pole at Ponce de Leon park.

It's there. I think Atlanta is going to win the 1935 baseball pennant. So there it is.

We've finally got an organization which isn't trying to crash the newspapers instead of the first division; which admits it is an organization which needs the help of one and all. And it has gone to work. It is encouraging to note that Eddie Moore is bearing up fairly well with the position of being manager.

This organization knows the Atlanta fans aren't sitting on their hands. They are eager to line up and spend their money for baseball. They again will win the attendance cup from New Orleans and other competing cities. And if Eddie Moore clicks then they will set a new attendance record for him and he would be presented with a good, fat contract.

I think Eddie Moore can do it. He needs to count ten before he decides things and go carefully along, avoiding the pitfalls into which his predecessors in office dropped. But if he has the capacity to create loyalty he will get along. Being a ball player he knows that ball players are human beings, something other managers haven't known.

At any rate boys the flag is out there. The winter pennant. And it's going to be permanent—right on through the summer.

There isn't anything exciting about a nude pennant pole.

THEY ALL NEED US.

The Atlanta baseball club has taken a lot of slaps from the league heads.

The league, of course, would fold right up were Atlanta to withdraw from the league and enter the American Association. The transportation angle could be figured out. It isn't such a long hop to Louisville and adjacent cities.

And some day that's going to happen—Atlanta is going into a AA league where the town belongs.

I never understood why the league didn't follow the lead of the new Cracker owners, the finest sportsmen in baseball, and expand—eliminating the rookie rules and putting better ball clubs on the field.

But they never do it and one of these days the Atlanta club is going to wave the big stick and get some action. The Atlanta club holds it and has never employed it.

I recall at least three managers who arrived in Atlanta last season with just about enough cash on hand to give the players meal money for the next day. And left with enough to meet the pay rolls.

This town keeps the league going. There isn't any doubt about that.

And do they bite the hand that feeds them?

Well, all our baseball organizations have done for years is yell "outch" and go around with a bandaged hand. They've mangled it, our little cousins have.

So, I hope some day the club will wave the big stick and get the boys in line. And if they won't fall in, why move on out. There are several American Association cities which are ready to drop out. That league needs reorganizing. We may be in on it.

In other words, pals, my feelings are hurt. We've been patient and long-suffering here in our town, turning the other cheek and all that. But this year—well, look out. By July 4 it should be all over.

RIFLE CLUBMEN HONOR SHOOTERS

By Jack Troy.

The Atlanta Rifle Club, with a small membership but a long list of achievements in national and international events, last night held the annual banquet at the Kimball House. There was the usual conviviality and a review of the club's achievements during the year. It was again brought out that some of the nation's best rifle-shooting is done in Atlanta, thanks, mainly to Charles Hamby, the A. R. C. sharpshooter.

Hal Drake, who recently was appointed as director of the national rifle association, was honored. Drake, who is the only southerner on the board and the second southerner ever selected, will serve for three years.

His great interest and tireless work in behalf of rifle-shooting earned him a position on the board. ACHIEVEMENTS. Here are the club's outstanding achievements for the year: The Atlanta Rifle Club, in competition against leading rifle clubs of the country, this was in February. Charles Hamby won five out of seven matches and set a world record for straight run of bull-eyes at 500 yards. The record was 297 bulls fired on two days without sighting shots. Hamby also made a record in the 200-yard international match.

Hal Drake and Rufus Godwin tied for first place in the Dewar two-man team match. The rifle club held the second annual rifle Georgia rifle and pistol match with shooters entered from six different states. Hamby established a world record in the small bore match by shooting a score of 388 out of 400. The club made the best showing of any club represented.

SEVEN STRAIGHT. In the N. R. A. Dewar course, any night, league and A. R. C. won seven straight matches and set a record for each week of 1,992 points out of 2,000 for high men.

Drake, Godwin, Robertson, Summerville and Hume represented the club on the railway. In August, Summerville won the American Legion 50-meter match. Hamby teamed with Thurman Basile to win the short range two-man and the first winner of the Dewar course.

Drake and Godwin placed fourth in the long-range two-man match, just one point behind Hamby and Basile. The rifle club placed well in the team matches.

Rufus Godwin tied for first place in the preliminary Dewar match but was out-ranked. The club finished in the 100-100 and also placed in the exclusive 100-lip for firing a perfect score over the Dewar course.

HAMBY FIFTH. Hamby achieved fifth place in trophy for the Dewar team and shared honors with Thurman Basile of being the only two men in the United States to fire on this team for the last three years. Hamby was coached by his old sidekick, Hal Drake, and Drake came in for a share of the glory as Hamby shot a score of 399 out of 400.

The entire team dropped only 50 points for a new world record of 7,990 points in the United States.

Paul Robertson, a railway employee and a member of the A. R. C., was the first man to represent the club on the railway. He fired a perfect score of 400 in the 100-100 and also placed in the exclusive 100-lip for firing a perfect score over the Dewar course.

GODWIN WINS. After Perry, the club started training for the Dewar team. Rufus Godwin won the 100-100 and also placed in the exclusive 100-lip for firing a perfect score over the Dewar course.

KNOWLES WINS. CINCINNATI, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Carl Knowles, 166, of Savannah, Ga., knocked out S. Roberts, 168, of Chicago, in the second round of their scheduled 10-round fight here last night.

Pointers or Setters? Smart Breeding Needed

Too Much In-Breeding Given as Reason for Latter Dogs' Continued Failure in Field.

By Ralph McGill.

Pointers or setters? In the fourteenth century there was in use a spaniel which set or stopped game. The hunters then netted the entire covey, if it happened to be quail. This was most effective and prevented the hunting of any singles, but it was, of course, not a great deal worse than the automatic gun of today in the hands of an expert hunter.

From these spaniels of the fourteenth century there descended the English setter. But about 1830 a north English sportsman began to produce a hunting dog which came to bear his name—the Laverack setters.

Laverack had found a suitable sire and dam, their names remaining in setter history as Ponto and Old Moll. They were superior to other setters and produced a dog which had more bird dog sense than the Laveracks and still retained their energy and style. They were the ideal field type dog.

A GREAT BREED. About the time the Civil War was going along two pairs of rugged setters were crossed with the Laveracks and produced a dog which had more bird dog sense than the Laveracks and still retained their energy and style. They were the ideal field type dog.

Wales a wealthy sportsman heard of them. He began to purchase the best of the breed and within a short time had the greatest setter kennel in the British empire, which happens to be a far-flung empire. Americans began to hear of them and to purchase them. They called the new type setter Llewellyn, which happened to be the name of the Welsh sportsman.

And the Americans, referring to them as blue-blooded dogs, began insisting on 100 per cent Llewellyn, even though the breed was a cross breed and not a pure one.

SETTERS LOSING OUT. Today the setter breed is losing out in the field trial game with the pointers, which are showing up at the trials with a pointer or so along with their setters.

More and more setter owners who looked with contempt on the pointers, are showing up at the trials with a pointer or so along with their setters.

The pointers keep winning. The Llewellyn did this week at Albany, Ga., when the Southern amateur was run, and the week before in the Continental, saw pointers win a great majority of the awards.

POINTERS DOMINATE. The same situation exists all over the country as the trials are run. The pointers dominate. The pointer owners say there is a very definite explanation. They assert that the setter owners today are doing just what Laverack did years ago, inbreeding too much.

The tendency is to breed to blood lines rather than to performance. They insist the setter breed could be made dominant again by breeding only to performance.

LEWELLYN DID IT. Llewellyn did this. The moment he heard of a capable performer, he purchased him and within a few years built up probably the greatest kennel the world has ever seen. The pointer owners say there is a very definite explanation. They assert that the setter owners today are doing just what Laverack did years ago, inbreeding too much.

Crackers' Ace Pleased Over His '35 Contract

Tells of Early Ambition To Become Inflied; Made Debut With Spartanburg.

By Jimmy Jones.

Back in 1923, a stocky, bow-legged lad with a hand-me-down traveling bag and a lot of ambition to become a great third baseman, reported to the Spartanburg (S. C.) club of the South Atlantic league.

The kid, a high school youth from Arkansas, thought he was an inflied, but the Spartanburg manager, who was Bernard (Mike) Kelly, since became a big league coach, had one look at him in batting practice and decided he was a pitcher.

In an important series with Charlotte—the strongest club in the league—Spartanburg ran out of relief pitchers. The manager, in sheer desperation, sent the 16-year-old lad from Arkansas to the bullpen with instructions to go in there and "throw 'em and duck."

Harry Kelley, who was the pitcher, proceeded to throw them but he did not duck. On the contrary, he started breezing the ball past some of Charlotte's best hitters, which, incidentally included Roy Carlyle, Ben Paschal, "Dutch" Krehmeyer and a few others.

From that day to this, Harry Kelley, who yesterday signed a contract with the Atlanta Crackers, prepared to begin his twelfth season as a Southern league pitcher, has been a winner. "Weren't you afraid of the Charlotte hitters?" Harry was asked.

"I might have been, but I didn't have sense enough at that time to worry about hitters," he replied.

It is a far cry from that day to this, but Kelley, apparently contented and pleased to be all signed up and ready to go again, has not changed. He is still as naive and pleasant as he must have been as the green Arkansas kid who reported to "Mike" Kelly at Spartanburg 12 years ago.

KNOWS HITTERS. We gained a few of Harry Kelley's impressions, his likes and his dislikes from a pitcher's standpoint in talking to him while here. He does not like to be a manager to tell him how to pitch and what to pitch to a certain hitter. He likes to pitch his own ball.

He also talked about catchers—his favorites among the many batters makes he has had. Johnny Berger, who caught him for years at Memphis and who was forced off the roster of that team through amputation of a finger, was his favorite catcher and Joe Palumbo, of the present Crackers, ranks next.

"Palumbo is a great little receiver. A good hitter and thrower. He is a better all-around ball player than Berger, but Johnny was as good a receiver as I ever pitched to when it came to knowing how to handle me. Incidentally, Kelley has had quite a few fine catchers. His first two at Memphis in 1924 were Frank Koelbecker and Yam Yaryan.

He has pitched against some great hitters in the Southern league, but says that Johnny Gill, of the 1922 Chattanooga club, was the toughest for him. Bonowitz, later a Cracker, and a member of the same club, was another tough one.

Bonowitz, a right-handed hitter, could step back on a right-handed pitcher like Kelley and hit the ball to right field on the hit and run play. Harry, who possesses a great spirit, revealed himself as a true competitor on the field in that he rarely becomes friendly and fraternizes with players on the opposing team.

He and Bert Niehoff are great friends now, but were great enemies when Bert managed and played second base for the Crackers in 1925.

"I was always gunning for Bert and he for me in those days," Harry pointed out.

TRAGIC CAREER. Kelley has had a most interesting, and at the same time, a most tragic career. He lost four members of his immediate family, including his favorite brother, inside of 14 months. Between taking his regular turn on the mound for Memphis, he spent his time at the hospital that year, but enjoyed one of his greatest seasons.

Kelley is very devoted to his family. That year he even mortgaged his farm

COLD POSTPONES ROSS, KLICK BOUT

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 24.—(AP)—The same weather jinx which has interfered with many a midwinter bout down here, today forced postponement of the Ross-Klick fight, scheduled tonight, until next Monday night.

The wave which came down from the north, bringing 38 degrees of cold and promises of no abatement tonight, decided promoters of the program that Miami's open-air stadium would be too cold for either fighting or sitting.

Lightweight Champion Barney Ross, of Chicago, and Frankie Klick, the San Francisco challenger, who will battle for Ross' synthetic junior welterweight title, and most of the other fighters on the supporting card, went back into training.

With some signs of disappointment, Ross and Klick took up ropes, weights, bags and sparring partners again, bent on keeping "in the pink," avoiding "staleness."

So did Joe Knight, the "Calro (Ga.) Cracker," best of the south's light-heavyweights, and Tony Shucro, of Boston, New England champion, who will meet in the 10-round semi-final.

Max Baer, heavyweight champion, who will box four exhibition rounds with Jimmy Maloney, said he and his brother, Buddy, "will do a little limbering tomorrow." Buddy, who now weighs 240 pounds, will face Tommy Davenport, of Chicago, who claims he also weighs 240, in a six-rounder.

Harry Has Joke On the 'Prince'

Harry Kelley, who signed his 1935 Cracker contract yesterday, was chuckling over a little joke he has on "Prince" Henry Oana, the Crackers' star centerfielder.

It came about on the closing day of last season. The Atlanta and Nashville teams had a field day at the ball park for which cash prizes were given.

Before the game, Kelley approached Oana and said:

"Henry, let's you and I split 50-50 on these prizes. I'll give you half of everything I win and you do likewise."

The Prince agreed to the bargain with Kelley, but, alas, to his sorrow.

Oana won three events—the 100-yard dash, throwing and long-distance hitting contests—and a total cash award of $15.

Kelley won nothing in the pitchers' contests, as Jack Brullheart, the Nashville outstopper, took all the prizes in that class.

Over Oana's protest, they split the $15—$7.50 each.

COTTONSEED OIL FIRM SEEKS TO REORGANIZE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 24.—(P)—The National Cottonseed Products Company, operating company for nearly a score of cotton mills and gins in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, last night filed a petition in federal court for a corporate reorganization under Chapter XI of the bankruptcy laws.

The petition, filed through Attorney General Russell, of Memphis, Tenn., and Berry & Sims, of Nashville, Tenn., set forth that all mills and property of the corporation were encumbered by the first mortgage, dated July 1, 1926, to secure the amount of $75,000.

The petition recites that substantially all of the remaining assets, consisting of cotton seed and cotton seed products, owned by the corporation, are pledged to several creditors.

Chemical Bank & Trust Company of New York, in the amount of $225,000, is the largest creditor. The petition states that the present market value of the assets is approximately $500,000 in debentures.

A total of $500,000 in debentures was issued by the corporation in 1926. The petition states that the corporation was without prospect of being able to pay.
